Good Morning Sir, Detainee Manning started sleeping without his underwear on the evening of Wednesday 2 March. He still retained his 2 suicide blankets that night as he always had in the past. The suicide blankets were never taken. Suicide smocks are not mandatory and our higher headquarters, PSL took the liberty of purchasing those. Since Monday 7 March, the day the smock arrived; Detainee Manning has slept in it and was still given the two suicide blankets so he could cover himself. Let me know if you need additional assistance Sir, thanks.

CWO2 Barnes,

I work up here for MajGen Ary. They were just in a meeting with the Under Secretary of the Navy who asked how long it was that Manning was sleeping naked before he got his smock.

I have an info paper that says his underwear was taken on 1 March and the smock was expected to arrive on 7 Mar but I need to confirm that actually happened.

Apologies if you've already been hit with this question. Please give me a call with any questions. Many thanks,

Very Respectfully,

John Dunn
