In a review of its own files on March 15, 1978, the CIA noted that,

Veciana had contacted the Agency three times - in December 1960, July, 1962 and April 1966 - for assistance in plots against Castro. (<sup>Veciana file</sup>~~File review~~ ~~SIS~~ <sup>Classified</sup> ~~Dec 78~~ file 201-312966 & Dir. 1885-31 - 3/15/78 - 78 0421219). According to the CIA: "Officers listened to Veciana, expressed no interest, offered no encouragement and never recontacted him on this matter." There has been no Agency relationship with Veciana."

The Committee in review of the Agency's file basically confirmed the <sup>stated</sup> results of the meetings with Uccenna in 1960 and 1966.

However, a review of files dated July 7, 1962 revealed that contact with Veciana had been made by an asset, SKREWER-1 and that SKREWER-1 had given Veciana $500 for operational activity. (Classified file IN 24738, 7/7/62)

David Atlee Phillips testified before the Committee in Executive Session on April 25, 1978. He said he never used the name ~~of~~ Maurice Bishop. He said he did not know of anyone in the CIA who used the name ~~of~~ Maurice Bishop. He said he had seen Antonio Veciana only twice in his life, the second time <sup>the</sup> ~~that very~~ morning of his hearing before the Committee when Veciana, who had testified earlier, emerged from the hearing room while he, Phillips, was in the hallway. Phillips said the first time he met Veciana was at a meeting of the Association of Former Intelligence Officers in Reston. He said that Veciana was brought to that meeting by an investigator from Senator Schweiker's office but, said Phillips, Veciana was not introduced to him by name but only as "the driver." He said Veciana asked him some questions in Spanish but at the time, ~~he didn't~~ he didn't know who Veciana was or why Senator Schweiker's office had sent him to the meeting.

Phillips also testified that he had never used the name ~~of~~ Frigault and had never used a Belgian passport.

Phillips was shown the sketch of Maurice Bishop but could not identify it as anyone he knew. He said, however, "It looks like me."

insert GUPTON

The Committee staff interviewed Doug Gupton on August 22nd, 1978 at CIA headquarters. <sup>(170)</sup> ~~(Staff interview, 8/28/78, JFY Document N-003101)~~ Gupton said he worked for the CIA from December, 1951, until his retirement in June, 1978, much of that time on the Covert Action Guidance Staff. <sup>(171)</sup> ~~(This)~~ Gupton confirmed that he was in charge of propaganda operations at the Miami JM/WAVE station and that his immediate superior was David Phillips. <sup>(172)</sup> ~~(This)~~ Gupton acknowledged that Ross Crozier was a case officer who worked for him and that he saw Crozier on a daily basis. <sup>(173)</sup> ~~(This)~~ Gupton said he does not recall whether E. Howard Hunt or David Phillips ever used the name of "Knight." <sup>(174)</sup> ~~(This)~~ He said he does not recall Phillips ever using the name of Maurice Bishop. <sup>(175)</sup> ~~(This)~~ When told about Crozier's recollection of him referring to Phillips as "Mr. Bishop," Gupton said: "Well, maybe I did. I don't remember." <sup>(176)</sup> ~~(This)~~ He also said, however, that he never heard the name of Bishop while he was stationed in Miami. <sup>(177)</sup> ~~(This)~~ When shown the sketch of Bishop, he said it did not look like anyone he knew. <sup>(178)</sup> ~~(This)~~

Explaining his working relationship with David Phillips, Gupton said he was in contact with him regularly in Washington by telephone and cable and that Phillips visited Miami "quite often." ~~(b)(1)~~ Gupton said, however, that there were two sets of operations. His set of operations was run out of Miami and he kept Phillips informed of them. Phillips ran another set of operations personally out of Washington and, Gupton said, Phillips did not keep him briefed about them. (180) ~~(b)(1)~~ Gupton also said he knew that Phillips used many of his old contacts from Havana in his personal operations. (181) ~~(b)(1)~~
