and they were trying to fight their way out when they surrendered.

When He surrendered Subject had a Heavy Weapons MOS, He acted as a platoon runner, assistant radio operator and ammo bearer in Company D, 1st Battalion, 38th Regiment, 2nd Division.

Subject was returned to UN control at "PANMUNJON" on 19 Aug 53. He was returned to CONUS on the USNS Marine Adder on 5 Sep 53.

In the Psychiatric Survey it was stated that Subject was marched to the north for nine (9) days after his surrender, but then managed to escape for four (4) days before His recapture. No other details given.

Subject was interned at the following locations:

Copy 8 of 30 Copies

[redacted]

Subject claims to have knowledge of escape attempts, but further questioning discloses that He had reference to several spur of the moment and abortive efforts on the part of individual prisoners.

3. UN Propaganda Broadcasts and Leaflets

[redacted] saw one leaflet drop approximately 50 miles north of the 38th parallel in Central Korea. Later He had occasion to observe one of the leaflets closely, and He remembers that it pictured an oriental begging for food. He saw some of the leaflets piled up in a Korean house and others being used as wall paper.

4. Foreign Weapons and Equipment

[redacted] could not recall seeing weapons or equipment of unusual design.

5. Health and Medical Service

EFK Act 6 (3) [redacted] had but meager knowledge of this subject. He made no mention of the prevalence of any disease, and the only medical facility He observed was the hospital at Camp #1. He describes this as a small institution capable of handling 30 patients at one time. The attendants were very poorly trained; and, while drugs and equipment were in evidence, they were used sparingly. [redacted] recalled that there was a marked difference in the food and living standards of the CCF and the native Koreans. This was not because the CCF had plenty, but because the North Korean civilians had so little.

6. Communist Political Indoctrination

[redacted] received the full range of indoctrination consisting of lectures, study periods, conferences, and Communist reading matter. He was told to ask His friends and relatives at home to fight for peace and to have them petition their senators.

7. Chinese, North Korean, and Soviet Army, Navy, and Air Force

a. Military Installation

(1) [redacted] stated that He saw about twelve (12) jet bombers and fifteen (15) MIG fighter planes land approximately 10 miles south of PYONGYANG on or about 15 Aug 53.

(2) Early in His captivity [redacted] saw a repair plant at the Mining Camp. The plant contained a machine shop equipped with lathes, milling machines, drill presses, and electric welding equipment.

(3) [redacted] remembered that He saw a radio station at CHANGSONG, Camp #1, while He was interned there. A PsW, who claimed to be familiar with radio equipment, told Him that the station had a range of 10 megacycles, and was the center-fed antenna type.

b. Military Movement

[redacted] recalled that approximately 1500 southbound enemy troops moved through Camp #1 in Jun 53.

c. Military Construction

Subject's only observation of military construction was at PYONGYANG while enroute to PANMUNJON for repatriation. He said that the Chinese were laying new railroad tracks.

d. Special Defensive Measures

(1) At Camp #1 [redacted] reported, that the CCF used bunker-type shelters covered with logs and dirt. Tree branches and limbs were used as camouflage on positions and trucks. In the Winter time the trucks were splashed with white wash.

(2) Camp #1, was completely encompassed by a trench and fox holes.

(3) Large amounts of food were delivered to Camp #1 in the fall of 1952.

(4) Air raids were fairly regular at Camp #1 during [redacted] internment. The air raid signal was communicated by a siren. Blackouts were frequently enforced.

(5) Nearer the front lines, [redacted] noticed that the air raid alert was signaled by rifle fire.

e. Military Training

[redacted] recalls seeing military training during His captivity but He does not say, where, when or whom He saw training. He remembered that the training consisted of hand grenade practice and small unit maneuvers.

[redacted] described His first search as being very light. He kept His hand grenades after being searched. He recalled that medical care was inadequate at first but improved later. He was photographed in early 1952 at Camp #1 but was not fingerprinted. Recreational equipment, consisting of volleyballs, basketballs, soccerballs, softballs, ping pong balls, tables, and nets, cards, chess sets, checkers, and Chinese pool, was available. Punishment consisted of self-criticism, wood chopping, confinement, hard labor, and cages. The Chinese issued safe-conduct passes at the front lines, promising good treatment and medical care for the wounded. Routine work at camp consisted of wood gathering, ration handling, and general company details.

b. Enemy Interrogation

Immediately after capture [redacted] was questioned about the organization of His unit, about the meaning of the different colored flares, and why UN troops had a search light on all of the time. Later He was asked personal questions, including His past military training and history.

c. Prison Camps and Staging Areas

JFK Act 6 (3)

(1) Mining Camps - located in a medium sized valley with a small river running through it. The camp contained an ore processing plant and had cable buckets coming to it from the mountain. The stream was always milky from the ore processing. While [redacted] was there the PsW population was approximately 400. He could not estimate the number of PsW of the various UN nationalities.

(2) Camp #1 is described by [redacted] as being located in the village of CHANGSONG. The village and camp were in a small valley with a river running through it. At the time of [redacted] internment the PsW population was about 1400 British and Americans.
