This reference is an SISS report which revealed that in January, 1959, classes at the University of Havana had been suspended for months by Batista and some students had engaged in terrorist activities against him. The mass of the student body never engaged in clandestine activities against Batista, proof of this contention was found in the small amount of students who actually did join Fidel Castro in the Sierra Maestra or Eloy Gutierrez Menoyo in the SNFE.

On 6/13/63, Gilberto Rodriguez Fernandez (100-420590) advised that he arrived in Cuba from the United States in early January, 1959, and that he became associated with various members of the SNFE which was headed by Eloy Gutierrez Menoyo with whom he was in frequent contact. An invasion of Cuba at Trinidad in August, 1959 was planned but this invasion failed because Menoyo advised the Cuban government of the plan. He was also in the company of Raul Castro in Havana and Rodriguez decided Menoyo could not be trusted. Menoyo called Rodriguez an enemy of Cuba and Rodriguez saw him for the last time in mid-1960. (Details of Menoyo's activities in connection with above planned invasion of Cuba and other revolutionary activities set out.)

G-2, Alien Detention Facility, McAllen, Texas (protect identity) furnished the results of an interrogation on 2/14/61, of Forencio Pernas - Lorenzo (105-98002). From January, 1959 to 2/14/61, Pernas as a member of SNFE was associated with Comandante Gutierrez Menoyo. He attended social and official gatherings of SNFE and made two trips to Miami with Gutierrez. He was requested by Gutierrez to Fla. participate in action against Trujillo and Batista followers who were to attack Cuba. Gutierrez decided to take him to the US to join other

On 2/15/61, [redacted] (134-9765) was being interviewed when he received a telephone call from Amparo Prieto, widow of Plinio Prieto, an anti-Castro rebel leader killed by Castro's forces in the Escambre Province approximately four months before. She informed [redacted] that Eloy Gutierrez Menoyo and Armando Fleites were at that time living in Miami. [redacted] stated that these men were respectively, Comandante and Second in Command of Fidel Castro's forces in the Escambre Province during the overthrow of Batista in Cuba. He stated that she informed him that they were dedicated communists and lately were supposed to have fallen in disfavor with Castro which caused them to leave Cuba. [redacted] stated that he could never trust these men and was of the opinion that they were probably Castro's intelligence agents in the US. (C) or contact with Alpha 66. CIA stated that it had no value because of its discrediting in the Cuban exile community by the disclosure of the secret alliance between its leader, Veciana, and Eloy Gutierrez Menoyo, head of SNFE. Under their alliance Gutierrez diverted Alpha 66 funds to finance SNFE paramilitary operations and ran them as Alpha 66 activities. The Alpha 66 combat element had no exploitable military value because it was either identical with or heavily penetrated by the Gutierrez action group. The dissident element of Alpha 66, referred to as L66, was regarded by CIA as a superficial split due to the presence in L66, particularly its combat group, of Alpha 66 operational personnel, who had been and probably would remain Gutierrez's men. On 3/8/63, Dr. Enio Zayas, Newark, NJ, a Cuban refugee, Doctor of Pharmacy, advised that before he came to the US in August, 1962, he was associated with his father, Dr. Constantino Zayas, owner of Linner Pharmaceutical Laboratories, Havana, Cuba. He stated that in early 1959, several meetings were held in Havana for the purpose of ousting the Somoza regime in Nicaragua. Dr. Manuel Lacayo Farfan was the leader of this group. Zayas and his father went to Costa Rica in June, 1960, on a business trip, however, his father wished to meet with various Nicaraguans living in exile in Costa Rica for the purpose of deposing of the Somoza regime. Shortly after they arrived they met with Eloy Gutierrez Menoyo. At that time Gutierrez was still Commandante of the Cuban Army and had gone to Costa Rica secretly by way of Mexico. At a subsequent meeting Dr. Lacayo offered the position of leader of the war effort against Nicaragua to Gutierrez, which he accepted. However something forced a cancellation of all these plans. It was Zayas' opinion that something happened between Gutierrez and Fidel Castro, and Gutierrez had to flee Cuba. Zayas stated that he did not know of any subsequent plans by these principals to accomplish the overthrow of the Somoza regime.

JFK Act 6 (4) _____, PSI (protect identity) advised that in April, 1963, a representative of Santos Trafficante, boss of the Mafia in Florida, approached Enrique Molina (105-96551) and another person, who were seeking arms and equipment for anti-Castro purposes. They did not have sufficient money to pay for this material, and Trafficante's representative promised them as much equipment as they needed if they would kill Eloy Gutierrez Menoyo, leader of the SNFE. This murder was to take place outside of the US. Trafficante wanted Gutierrez Menoyo killed because prior to April, 1963, he allegedly obtained $250,000 worth of arms and equipment from Trafficante and had not paid for it. Molina refused to get involved in such a murder. (X)(u)

CIA (protect identity) reported that Orlando Puente Perez, Secretary to former Cuban President Carlos Prio Socarras, stated that while on a trip to the West Coast in mid-October, 1963, he had talked with Luis Somoza, former Nicaraguan President, who was planning to make a trip to Japan. Somoza asked Puente to tell Prio that he could count on Somoza's full support and as soon as he returned from Japan, a mobilization of men in Nicaragua would begin for attacks against Cuba. According to the present schedule, such attacks would begin in early December, 1963. Prio had delegated to Puente the responsibility of completing the details of the plan with Eloy Gutierrez Menoyo, leader of the SNFE, and others, all of whom agreed to participate in Prio's plan by contributing men. ~~(S)~~(u)
