Subject: Conversation with Mary Ronan

See my entry in the agency contacts database for details re my conversation with Mary this afternoon. The short version is they're swamped and won't be in a position to make a formal presentation on their comments by Tuesday. She profusely apologized and hopes the board understands. She also suggested that after I get back from Seattle and you return from Germany, we should sit down with Mary, Miriam, and Steve and talk through all the issues we see arising or potentially a problem at NARA, the presidential libraries, and with other matters. She reiterated their desire to work closely with us and to help us avoid or deal with issues that may come up. I thanked her and told her I thought that was a good idea. What do you think?
