Subject: CIA documents
Barry just called and said that they're sending over another package of highlighted documents first thing tomorrow. I asked if that represented the balance, and he said that it did not, but that they would keep on working and would send more over later in the day, if that was all right. I told him that it would be. He also expressed concern over the Mexico City Chron. Now that they've conceded even more than in the last review of that document, they'd like the opportunity to look at it again, comparing it with the original records from which it's drawn. This is especially important, they feel, since their latest concession makes context all important. I told him I'd pass the word along to you. I gather he may call you as well.
