Subject: review track database

The good news: The FBI informed us this morning that they have agreed to release in full some more documents. The bad news: These are documents that have already been analyzed on the review track database, and (at least as far as I know) we don't have a procedure for documenting on the review track database this type of before-Board-vote release. This will be a recurring pattern, so we should put in place (computer-wise and personnel-wise) a systematic means of recording this type of release. Kevin and I have spoken briefly about some other possible ways of tinkering with the review track database. Please get a hold of one or both of us at your convenience.
