I think Anna is frustrated, perhaps hurt in some way, and this may also reflect that she feels that she didn't get the support she wanted from Kermit and me. If I were you, I'd consider drafting an empathic response, telling her that you are concerned about and committed to communicating with the Board, and that you'll be glad to discuss further with her how that might be accomplished. You might tell her that Jack is no better informed, tho' she may not believe you, that you would be glad to consider ways to "follow through" in ways that might help her in terms of reporting staff activity. I don't think Anna has a realistic notion of what it means to govern (as opposed to manage), tho' our legislative duties do place us in a somewhat different position. Is this helpful? I wish all this were otherwise! --Bill To: WLJOYCE <WLJOYCE@firestone>From: David Marwell <David_Marwell@jfk-arrb.gov>Date: 11 Apr 96 17:45:34 Subject: Re: NY Times ArticleMime-Version: 1.0Content-Type: Text/PlainBill:What do you make of this? I won't raise it again. We have important work and I will simply have to take time from other responsibilities if I choose to be as up to date as Jack. I will take detailed notes of all your briefings and follow through on them myself. I will also try to keep abreast of other staff activities that Tom had to help us with when we were questioned on WGN. Meanwhile, e-mail is a good form for brief communications. Anna
