Subject: Computer Access

I have asked Chet to give you both access to the following databases:Where in the World Lists names of those who are out of the office, their destination(s) and expected return time(s). You are not required to use this database when you leave the office, but it is esp. nice when you are working somewhere else to remind everyone else that you are, in fact, diligently toiling away in your capacity as a public servant. If you are going to be out for an entire day, the db is quite good for reminding everyone ELSE that you are on a long-scheduled vacation or whatever. Musings General muttering of the office. Feel free to participate. Entries on the Musings board are deleted every couple of weeks.Musings II Musings II is for more permanent non-work information, like good restaurants, recipes, New Year's Resolutions, etc. . . Entries here are not deleted.Warren Comm'n Summary This db is the product of a group of high school seniors who came for a week last year and summarized the 26 volumes of the Warren Comm'n Report.Mary Ferrell Mary Ferrell is an assassination researcher who created this monster of a database of names, places, etc. . . related to the assassination. It is a good search tool and can lead you to a number of secondary sources if you are working on a subject matter research project.Library We have quite a few books for you to use here in the office. The Library database tells you which ones we have & who has them -- talk to Eric Schienkopf for more info. Hopefully, Chet will act quickly in getting you access to these. If you don't have access in a few days, remind me and I will remind him. Or, you can e-mail him directly.
