Subject: Re: Joe's memo

Since I have only a cursory understanding of the documents Joe is referring to, I can only give limited input. However, his recommendations seem logical to me, and I concur with his system to review these documents. A word of caution, at least from my end: it appears that there have been a number of developments on the military team, and specifically in my assigned area, during the last week. I was already a week behind from having been in Boston, and I expect that after my briefing at 9:30, I will feel even further behind in my responsibilities to the military team. If you were/are thinking of doing this in the immediate future, I may not be as available as I probably should be for this undertaking. I thought you should know.
