Subject: Federal Register question
I spoke to Bob regarding the FBI documents in the current Federal Register: the first number is the RIF followed by the number of releases (former redactions in the document that are released) then followed by the number of postponements, and the postponement date. Bob said this is the old style of listing the documents, which was the way it was done in the old computer database, but that now, on Fast Trak, we only keep record of the number of postponements, instead of both postponements and releases. I don't know why the FBI documents were listed in the old style and the CIA documents in the new style; Bob thought maybe these FBI documents were older, and therefore from the older database .
