Subject: Navy Compliance

Doug-- The Navy (Chris Tynes) just called regarding their Final Compliance Statement, which is due today. C. Tynes asked whether we have been working with ONI separately, which he said had been his assumption. I said that it was my understanding that the last communication we received regarding ONI's work under the JFK Act was their interim compliance report of April 1997. However, I made it clear that we had not separately requested from ONI any Final Compliance Report and that we were relying on Mike Finnie, as the Navy compliance officer, to report on the final compliance of ONI. I got the impression that Finnie's office does not have an update on what ONI has done and that is why Finnie's office was asking us what we have done with respect to ONI. I told C.Tynes that you would call him and advise him whether we have done any work with ONI since the Spring of 1997. Please emphasize that the Navy compliance official is responsible for reporting on ONI's compliance and that has been our assumption throughout, regardless of any direct communication we may have had with ONI. We should discuss. --Ron
