Subject: CIA Letter

Body: I have read the CIA's letter in which they request that they be allowed to have one "RVO" certify that CIA did a thorough agency-wide search for assassination records. I have an open mind on the issue, but I would like to talk to them about why they believe that certifying the search for each directorate is "unnecessarily cumbersome and confusing." Wouldn't the RVO have to double-check with each directorate, anyway? It seems to me that the only additional hassle is updating a few more responsible officials and getting them to sign off on it. But maybe they have additional arguments that are not immediately apparent from the letter. I think we should talk to them about this in my first meeting with them next week. What do you think?
