recstat: AMSubject: underwoodMr. Underwood has reluctantly decided to meet with us and wants to try to do it some time next week. He said he will call me next Monday or Tuesday. I tried to get him to commit to a particular date, but he went on about the state he's in and how he has to talk to his doctor, etc. He mentioned that it had been bothering him that he hadn't finished his business with us and wants to "get it over with." He asked me if I would send him the questions in advance. This is the closest he's come to meeting with us, so I figure if I send him the questions he might actually go through with the interview. While I told him we wanted to make this as easy on him as possible, and could meet him at a place that would cause the least amount of duress, he thinks the same hotel where we met the last time would be best.Who do you want to conduct the deposition? (You, Ron or Kim?) Do you have particular questions in mind or should I take a stab at it and run them by you?
