Subject: Re: Informant issues

In thinking some more about the Board's visit next week, we should consider to what extent we can address the informant issue as well as the matters already set for a full schedule. The only time I can see for having a discussion on this is Monday morning, which is already slotted for privacy. Although I agree we need to move forward on informants quickly, I'm also hopeful we can bring the privacy issue to closure, which may mean taking the whole morning (especially given that we'll be discussing particular documents). I also wonder whether we shouldn't wait until after the CIA briefing, which I assume will touch on informant issues, to incorporate both CIA and FBI agency perspectives into a single comprehensive briefing on the issue with a goal of bringing it to closure as well. Let me know what you think.
