Eager for foreign tourists and their money, Castro has signed a deal with the resort chain Club Med to open a beach-side getaway next winter 86 miles east of Havana. Cuba will pay to build the resort, and Club Med will pay to run it. Club Med gets the profits but will pay the Cuban government an unspecified rent, Marc Siles, Club Med's overseas relations director, said in Paris on Monday. Siles said he didn't know the cost of construction, but said he assumed Cuba can afford it. This won't be Club Med's first communist locale. There's been one in Bulgaria and another in Romania. In December, the chain announced plans to open in China. In Cuba, Club Med hopes to attract tourists from Canada, Europe and South America. Americans need State Department authorization to travel to Cuba.
