Subject: Re: Press Release
 Bill. The strategy for delaying the release was based on the hope that the White House, once in possession of the written arguments from both sides, would prevail on the FBI to withdraw and thereby avoid a public appeal process. Bill Leary from the NSC reported that the White House Counsel's office indicated that there would be no such informal handling of the matter. He indicated that there would be a meeting within a few weeks with all of the parties involved. Consequently the possible advantages of waiting were clearly outweighed by the criticism that we would invite by not keeping the public informed of the status of these documents. The press release was coordinated with the FBI (resulting in a minor modification), and the White House received advanced notification. There has been no press reaction as of this morning. What did the White House tell you to induce you to issue the press release today? Please show Jerri the message below about words ending in "gry.") Many thanks... Try: aggry (also aggri) a kind of glass bead begry (obsolete for beggary) gry The smallest component of Locke's system of measurement iggry hurry up (anglo-Egyptian) meagry with a meagre appearance nangry (obs.) angrypodagry dodder, or a dodder-infested plant (dodder is a plant parasite) It must be said that these are rather on the obscure (not to say obsolete) side, but they are all in the OED 2, CD-ROM (thank heavens for searchable databases). There are also such truly obsolescent and fugitive words as higry-pigry. erd@mhv.net WILSEY RARE BOOKS <http://www.clark.net/pub/wilsey>
