Body: David, Have you seen copies of the letters that are being sent to the Board that are critical of me for not receiving any input from the researcher community regarding the medical issues and of the Board members for not attending the depositions? These uninformed letters are, in my opinion, 100% counterproductive. The ARRB was not required to examine any of the medical issues. I spent some capital convincing others that this work should be done and I devoted an enormous amount of time preparing for the depositions. When people send letters of that sort they create exactly the wrong controversy. Instead of thanking the Board for working on this topic (and thereby supporting a continuation of my efforts), the writers are making my work controversial with the very people whose support I need. I would rather spend my time pushing forward on the evidentiary issues rather than covering my flank from such attacks. Why are these people undermining the very efforts that they should be supporting? No wonder the Establishment does not take seriously "researchers" who shoot first (in the name of "Truth") and ask questions later. Best, Jeremy
