 With less than a week before the scheduled date, only seven of our staff of over 20 have signed up for the picnic. Additionally, it has come to my attention that there are whispers out there that people might not be attending the picnic because there will be several good-bye parties in a very short time span. I could remind people that a) this date was specifically chosen as to afford the departing people and those who are staying one last chance to socialize together, and b) that over a month ago, when I first began suggesting this exercise, I asked for input on the date, and no one gave any input at all, much less suggested that there would be too many events going on at this time. However, I won't do that. I will simply put the question to all of you: should we still have the picnic, or shall we call it off? Are YOU planning on attending? Please let me know soon, because I am sure we all could come up with something else to do that day, and people need to know whether to plan on being at the picnic Saturday or not.
 And on a related note...I have an announcement:I will not seek, nor will I accept, another term as your social chairman.In other words, I hereby resign as the unofficial office social chairman, effective immediately after this picnic, if it is even held. My reasons are twofold:A) There is a tangible lack of school spirit among us anymore, and no one gets motivated enough to attend social events. In this light, it is hard to justify continuing efforts at social direction.B) Clearly, my skills have eroded, and it has become apparent to me that my social direction is now insufficient to muster even the smattering of school spirit that remains. I have enjoyed my service as your Social Chairman. Thank You. And, as I retire, I remind you: Old party boys never die... they just become worthless couch potatoes telling the same stories over and over about parties past--- er, I mean, they just fade away.
