 Chairs of Congressional Committees Announced -- On November 22, the House Republicans announced that Representative Dan Burton (D-IND) will chair the House Government Reform and Oversight Committee, which has oversight responsibility for the National Archives. Burton replaces William Clinger (R-PA) who retired. Also on November 22 Representative Rob Livingston (R-LA), the chair of the House Appropriations Committee, announced that Jim Kolbe (R-AZ) will head the Appropriations Subcommittee on the Treasury, Postal Service, and General Government, which determines the budgets for the National Archives and the National Historical Publications and Records Commission (NHPRC). For some time, there had been indications that Representative Ernest Istook (R-OK) would head this subcommittee. On the Senate side, the Republicans plan to announce the selection of committee chairs next week. Senator Richard Shelby (R-ALA) who has chaired the Appropriations Subcommittee on the Treasury, Postal Service, and General Government, which has responsibility for the National Archives and NHPRC budgets, is expected to move on to chair the Senate Select Intelligence Committee. Thus there is some speculation as to who will replace Shelby.
