Subject: Re: Photographic Record

Thank you for your reply and for your offer. I will try to be as clear as I can about the kinds of information that would be helpful for our work. Because we are pursuing records rather than recollections, we need leads that can tell us where we can look to find records. I will give you a specific example that I hope illustrates the issue: Robert Knudsen. We are aware of the allegations that Mr. Knudsen claimed to have taken autopsy photos and to have had copies that he showed to others. We are also confronted by the fact that, when he had an opportunity to say so under oath, he did not do so. We have spoken to his family. Although they also are under the impression that he took autopsy photos, they do not have any photos or know where any would be. Thus, as far as Knudsen goes, we are at a dead end. The kind of lead that is not helpful at this point is to hear that he allegedly showed photos to someone. The kind of thing that would be of significant value would be a lead (in addition to the suggestion of contacting his family), as to where any of his photos might be. In short, we need concrete leads regarding locations where photos might be found rather than recollections that additional photos may have been taken. We are aware of the general allegations. We need specific leads. You may be interested in knowing that we have spoken in depth with (among others) Vince Madonia, Robert Bouck, and Carl Belcher as well as to the two photo technicians who developed autopsy photos at NPC. Dr. Randy Robertson and I have been working on together on this for nearly a year, and we have assembled quite a bit along with the discovery several relevant witnesses including former Naval photographer, Joseph O'Donnell (made famous by his photos of Nagasaki immediately following the bombing), who was quoted in yesterday's email. We also believe we have fairly accurately reconstructed what occurred. If you have any specific concerns regarding this issue, I'd be glad to address them first. It may take a few days to put the information together. But if you need is urgent I can send it in sections as I complete it. Respectfully, Kathy Cunningham
