Jeremy, I have just seen your e-mail below. I have already put the call into Megan, but if you do not need the Bradlees materials pursued by me at this time, pending Michelle's activities, please advise. I don't want to double-team Megan Denoyers unnecessarily. I'll wait to hear from you. Thanks. Tom

FYI. In theory, all of the Bradlee material should now be open in full at the JFK Library. They are supposed to be sending copies to Steve, but I doubt that has been done yet. Michelle, could you put this on a list of issues to be confirmed with the Library?

Doug: Thank you for the note. I am very familiar with the Bradlee Globe article and agree with everything you said about getting all relevant material into the Collection and I appreciate your interest in getting it in preparation for your Texas trip. I will call you on Thursday on this matter. I will then talk to the JFK Library about access to this information. I believe that there was some communication with someone at the Board and the Library staff about the Bradlee material. If I am correct, I would like to know who at the Library to talk to on this material. I will be able to go to the Library as early as Monday, March 3rd, if I set everything up at the Library for a visit. FYI, I know Kurkjian pretty well and would be very comfortable in calling him to get "the story behind the story" (if there is one) on the Bradlee piece. I have talked to Bradlee in the past, but not in a long time. I'll talk to you on Thursday.

Tom
 P.S. Chet, David, or Thom could pull the article off of Compuserve by going into the Boston Globe archives.

Tom, I have asked Eric to obtain the Boston Globe article itself for us from the L.O.C. David Marwell advised me, and Livingstone's High Treason (I) confirms, that the notes and audiotapes of the interviews of Dallas Doctors by Ben Bradlee, Jr. are at the JFK Library. According to a footnote in Livingstone's book, Nils Bruzillas went on the trip to Texas with Bradlee, and someone named Steve Kurkjian (described as "their boss") was involved in the writing, or editing, of the story. Can you check on what source materials are available on this subject from the JFK Library? Jeremy and I are going to Texas during the 3rd week in March to interview Dr. Grossman, Dr. Crenshaw, and Nurse
