Subject: OMB final rule on classification of government documents
The Friday, May 9 Federal Register contains, on pages 25426-25433, a final rule on the classification, downgrading, declassification and safeguarding of national security information. A final rule from OMB sets out the procedures to follow on these matters and lists the OMB staff authorized to originally classify information and the Top Secret and Secret levels. The rule also contains information on the procedures OMB should use when other government agencies and the public request that classified material in OMB files be reviewed for possible declassification and release. Finally, there is information on how to appeal a decision not to declassify information.
