Subject: Re: J. Lee Rankin papers

I will be sending you three document samples that we have available in our office (sample of notes taken during the interrogation of Oswald, donated by James Hosty, a page from Clay Shaw's diary the day he was arrested, and James Angleton's testimony to the HSCA.) Once we review and release documents, they are sent to the National Archives. We from time to time we make copies available here when it is a volume we can handle. The Archives has a web site that lists and summarizes documents in the JFK Collection. That address is <http://www.nara.gov/nara/jfk/jfk.html>. I hope this information is helpful to you. Sincerely, Eileen Sullivan

I received the selected samples today -- thank you! Most interesting. I wonder if the ARRB has selected samples still available from all previous releases -- and, if so, could I request them? Does the ARRB offer for sale any of the released documents -- and do you have a master list of available documents -- or, rather, highlight lists of the batch releases? Any information you could provide for me to start my attempt to collect some of the documents would be appreciated. Regards, Cheryl
