Subject: RE: Hey!

Hello, my friend, My job hunt is going only slightly better than your apartment hunt. It is pretty difficult to find something that fits well with my experience. I am looking mostly at government jobs, and I need to make at least what I am getting now (but of course We would prefer more). I have one lead on a job that I really want, and ideally I would get it, and they would say, "Start October 1", that way I could see this job through to the very end. It is with the Information Security Oversight Office (ISOO). Nice orwellian name, eh? It is basically a policy office of the National Archives that helps agencies implement the President's order on what can and cannot be nationally security classified. With the end of the cold war, Clinton wanted to present a more open government, and this is part of that effort. I have, of course, a strong bias toward openness, especially when it comes to documents older than 25-30 years. On the apartment business, isn't there a sort of bohemian area of Toronto where the rents a cheap, but the spaces are big. The area is maybe slightly rough, but coming around. Whatever the case, much safer than Venice, CA. You should be able to find a nice place, Mike. Are you and Sarah still planning to come through the D.C. area in August sometime? What is the story
