That's certainly possible. However, some tapes were not numbered, and just had dates. Other were identified by line number.

Could there physically be two or more tapes with the same tape number? Perhaps the numbers designate a time period (a day?) rather than a unique number for each tape. Just a guess.

I have been working on it, I am trying to get it done today. The only problem is that my list of tape numbers does not appear to match the 185 that they physically counted. I came up with about 176.
