THE SECRETARY OF DEFENSE

WASHINGTON, DC 20301-1000

Dear Military Member:

The booklet you hold, Once a Veteran, has been prepared to give you an overview of the services available to military members leaving active duty. I hope you will take advantage of all these benefits as you make the transition to a satisfying civilian career.

Most importantly, I hope you will keep in mind what you are bringing to the civilian world: a superb track record of achievement as a member of the United States Armed Forces. Your professionalism, self-discipline, and initiative helped make our Armed Forces the finest in the world. No organization can do better than to have you as a member of its team.

As Secretary of Defense, it has been my privilege to be associated with the outstanding men and women in uniform serving our country. Americans everywhere are proud and grateful for all you have accomplished. Your contributions have only just begun. Thank you, and all the best.

Dale Cheney

Introduction

The programs and benefits described in this pamphlet can improve your life immeasurably. It tells you how to get assistance you need from programs available to you because of your military service.

The pamphlet also points out that you can remain in service and still claim many benefits.

A Discharge Is Important. All benefit programs for veterans and their dependents administered by the Department of Veterans Affairs require that the veteran be separated from the period of service upon which benefit entitlement is based under conditions other than dishonorable (with the exception of some insurance programs and certain medical and education benefits). An honorable or general character of service discharge qualifies the veteran and dependents for most benefits. A dishonorable discharge bars all VA benefits to the former service member and dependents. An under-other-than-honorable-conditions or bad-conduct discharge may or may not qualify the veteran and dependents and survivors, depending upon a special determination made by VA. This determination is based on the facts of each case as to whether the veteran was separated from service under dishonorable conditions or "other than dishonorable conditions." In addition, federal law sets forth some special conditions concerning eligibility requirements for veterans benefits pursuant to upgraded discharges of certain former service members. See "Review of Discharge" (Page 31).

Certain Periods of Service Required. The law generally denies benefits to people originally enlisting in military service after Sept. 7, 1980, and to all other people entering military service after Oct. 16, 1981, who do not complete the shorter of (1) 24 months of continuous active duty or (2) the full period for which the person was called or ordered to active duty. This provision does not apply to veterans who have a service-connected disability or who were discharged close to the end of an enlistment term for reasons of hardship or for a disability incurred or aggravated in line of duty. It also does not apply to insurance benefits or the provision of any benefit for, or in connection with, a service-connected disability, condition or death.

If you are separating from an initial period of active military service and have less than 24 continuous months of active duty, consult with your separation counselor about how the law affects your entitlement to federal benefits based on military service.

Before outlining all VA benefits available to you, this pamphlet will cover the nine points of information you should receive in your preseparation briefing.

Preseparation

Six months prior to discharge or release from active duty, you should begin preparing for separation. If you will be honorably discharged, you need to learn about the many VA benefits that will be available to you. DoD policy states that all personnel released from active duty are entitled to pre-separation counseling. Your records should show that counseling was offered on the following topics:

- ☐ Educational assistance, including the Montgomery GI Bill;
- ☐ Compensation and vocational rehabilitation entitlement offered under the Departments of Defense, Labor and Veterans Affairs;
- ☐ Affiliation with the Selected Reserve;
- ☐ Government and private-sector employment search/placement assistance;
- ☐ Employment assistance for your spouse;
- ☐ Relocation assistance;
- ☐ Medical and dental coverage after separation;
- ☐ Career-change effects;
- ☐ Financial planning assistance.

Educational Assistance

You may be entitled to a number of VA education benefits; they can be found on Pages 6-7 of this booklet. Make a point to visit your local military installation education office. The counselors can offer you many services. Not only can they advise you on education benefits, they also administer aptitude, certification and college entrance tests. Educational counselors can also provide career advice, information on vocational and educational institutions, student loan information and educational literature.

Prior to departing the military, you should receive an automated verification of experience and training document, or "verification transcript," containing a description of your military experience and training history, recommended college credits and comparable civilian career fields associated with your military experience. This document is being made available to all separating military personnel.

Compensation and Vocational Rehabilitation

There are many programs designed to provide compensation and vocational rehabilitation to the veteran. Many are aimed at assisting those with disabilities. However, even if you are not separating because of disability, you are still eligible for a wide variety of benefits and services.

Relocation Assistance

Upon leaving the service, there are many areas with which you should be concerned. On Page 29, you can learn about final pay and allowances, transportation home, legal assistance at separation and estate planning.

As stated earlier, there are several job search and placement services available to you. Register within 180 days of departure for the Transition Assistance Program seminar. If you travel on permissive TDY orders to attend a Department of Defense-approved transition program seminar, you are eligible for space-available air transportation and may be accompanied by your spouse between CONUS and overseas, and within and between overseas areas.

Visit your nearest transition office/family center and avail yourself of the various counseling services. One of your first contacts should be with relocation assistance personnel, who can provide guidance in planning and managing your move. They can also help you obtain information on the locale where you will be settling. Also, you can write to the Chamber of Commerce of your specific region of interest and request a packet of information including industries, government facilities, recreational areas, schools and cultural events. The United Way is also a good source of special-needs information.

Medical and Dental Coverage

Check Pages 13-15 and 17-28 to learn about various health care options available and for a listing of the Veterans Centers you may visit. Consider your health to be one of your most important assets; take time to learn about all the many health benefits you are qualified to receive. Speak to the health benefits adviser at your medical treatment facility. During your separation counseling, you will also receive information on the Uniformed Services Voluntary Insurance Plan, or U.S. VIP, also known as the conversion health policy. While the program initially may appear costly, consider a one-day stay in the hospital may exceed the cost of the insurance for a family of four for a whole 90-day period.

Career Change Counseling

Making a change in your life is never easy, but it usually means new horizons, friendships, locales, opportunities and growth for you and your loved ones. Keep a positive attitude during your career change and follow these strategies:

- ☐ Take good care of yourself and your loved ones (remember, accidents and illness usually increase during stressful life changes).
- ☐ Take advantage of all job search opportunities presented to you.
- ☐ Research various options; read, watch and listen for new job ideas and career paths.
- ☐ Practice "networking" with friends, military associates and neighbors. Reach out and ask for help from everyone around you. Some of their job ideas may be very exciting.
- ☐ Maximize your self-confidence; grow and set new goals.
- ☐ Learn to accept temporary solutions while you wait for just the "right" position.
- ☐ Have faith in yourself: Don't give up.

Read Pages 7-8 for more in-depth information on back-to-work benefits, including employment assistance, unemployment compensation, re-employment rights and availability of federal jobs.

Selected Reserve Affiliation

To learn about the many benefits of remaining in the Selected Reserve, read Pages 29-30. You should not pass up the opportunity to maintain your affiliation with the U.S. armed forces. To locate units closest to you, look under "U.S. Government" in the local phone directory for the area in which you want to live.

Job Search and Placement Assistance

State employment offices and the veterans outreach programs are noted on Pages 7-8. Several other avenues of assistance are available for your job search. First, visit your installation transition office/family center. There, you and your spouse will have access to automated outplacement-assistance tools. Your local military installation may have leads on jobs in the area. In addition, you should actively network and pursue all employment avenues. There is no one way to find a job; you must maintain responsibility for your job search.

Check with your transition office/family center on the availability of the Transition Assistance Program or other training sessions. The three-day TAP seminar provides outplacement training that includes tips on resume writing, interviewing skills and other facets of job hunting, as well as assistance for the unique problems facing the disabled veteran. If space allows, spouses may also attend these seminars.

Enter yourself in the Defense Outplacement Referral System, which will automatically prepare a mini-resume of your military experience and training for referral to potential employers based on your occupational choices and geographic locations.

Access the electronic DoD Transition Bulletin Board, which will allow you to scan up-to-date advertisements for employment openings; information on veterans, military and civic associations and the services they offer; training seminar schedules; and job fair/conference announcements.

The state employment service offices, Veterans Affairs regional offices, Office of Personnel Management Federal Job Information/Testing offices, local Chambers of Commerce and military service or veterans organizations can provide you and your spouse a wide variety of job services and assistance. College placement offices, private employment agencies, school counselors and libraries are also good sources for job referrals. If you want to start your own company, contact the Small Business Administration for help and loan information. And always remember to network with co-workers, acquaintances, friends and family members. Sometimes they can be your best job leads.

Visit your transition office/family center and let the experts advise you and provide the support system you will need to make a successful career change.

Financial Planning Assistance

Before separating from the military, you need to review your financial situation. It is never too early to establish a budget and then learn how to live within that budget. While you were in the military, you received many benefits and services that you may now need to budget for — such as housing, long-term medical care, education and travel.

Begin your financial examination by reviewing your assets and liabilities, income and expenses and cash-flow statements. How much do you own, how much do you owe, how much money do you need to cover your necessary expenses, and how much can you save for your future? These are not easy questions, but there are books that can help you, seminars in your local community and personnel at your transition office/family center to direct you to the right people for help.

Part of your future financial stability will depend on documentation — papers you will need to keep and remember. Read Page 33 so you know what documents to save and how to save them. These papers can affect your taxes, future employment and compensation. Your legal assistance officer can help you review items such as your will, income tax returns and credit statements.

Always consult with your family on financial matters so they will have a full appreciation of the situation and how they can do their share to help.

Don't panic — plan ahead. Remember, those people who fail to plan are really planning to fail.

Involuntary Separations

In addition to the basic VA benefits already reviewed under pre-separation counseling, the 1991 Defense Authorization Act added several new transition benefits for active duty military personnel and their dependents who are involuntarily separated under honorable conditions during the five-year period commencing October 1, 1990. Check your military service for the eligibility standards for involuntary separation.

The benefits include:

- ┐ Excess leave and permissive temporary duty. Up to 30 days excess leave or 10 days of permissive temporary duty may be available to conduct job/house hunting or other relocation activities. However, only one or the other may be granted by the military department, not both. Space-available travel may be granted during the last 180 days of service to travel to Transition Assistance Program seminars or other assistance programs approved by DoD if they are not available at your present installation.

- ┐ Priority in affiliating with the National Guard or Reserve. Members who qualify and decide within one year after the date of separation that they want to join the National Guard or Reserve will get preference over any other equally qualified applicant and may be retained for up to three years as long as they maintain good standing in the unit, even if reserve component strength limitations change.

- ┐ Travel and transportation allowance. Authorized travel allowances and shipment/storage of household goods will be available to the military member and dependents for up to one year after separation, as long as the member is in the Army, Navy, Air Force or Marine Corps and not immediately eligible for retired or retainer pay.

- ┐ Extended eligibility for DoD dependents schools. Dependents overseas who completed the 11th grade and are likely to complete secondary school within 12 months of the date of the military member's separation are authorized to enroll in the final (senior) year of a DoD dependents school at U. S. government expense, but only in the same school or another school serving the same military community.

- ┐ Montgomery GI Bill. An involuntary separatee who was on active duty as of Sept. 30, 1990, and elected not to participate in the Montgomery GI Bill before separation or fell under the Veterans Educational Assistance Program will have the opportunity to enroll or convert to the Montgomery bill before leaving the service. A basic contribution of $1,200 must be made to complete the enrollment. If an eligible member converts from the Veterans Educational Assistance Program to the Montgomery GI Bill, reimbursement will be made for contributions over $1,200. See Pages 6-7 for more details on the Montgomery GI Bill.

- ┐ Extended health care. Involuntarily separated members and their dependents will continue to receive medical coverage from the Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services and medical care at the same priority as dependents of active duty personnel in military treatment facilities for a limited time following separation. Members with fewer than six years of service get 60 days of extended coverage; members with six or more years of service get 120 days of extended coverage. Pre-existing medical conditions are covered for one year after separation, if the member purchases a DoD-negotiated conversion health insurance policy and the policy does not cover a condition solely because it is a pre-existing condition.

- ┐ Extended commissary and exchange benefits. Commissary and exchange privileges will continue for two years from the date of separation.

- ┐ Extended military housing benefits. You may be permitted to remain in government housing for up to 180 days after separating, space permitting. The installation housing office will provide any specific local requirements imposed for rental reimbursement, which can be equivalent to the member's basic allowance for quarters and variable housing allowance in that location.

- ┐ Federal civilian employment preference. Involuntarily separated members and their dependents have available a one-time preference in DoD hiring for Non-appropriated Fund instrumentalities, assuming they are the best qualified candidates after a competitive screening process has been completed. Transition hiring preference pertains to all Non-appropriated Fund job vacancies, except that preference for military spouses under Section 806(a)(2) of the Military Family Act of 1985 takes priority over preference for transition-eligible personnel.

Education Benefits

You are probably leaving service with entitlement to one of two Department of Veterans Affairs educational assistance programs. Use these cash benefits to build employment skills that can mean brighter futures for you and your family. Principal VA programs include (1) the post-Vietnam-Era Veterans Educational Assistance Program; and (2) the Montgomery GI Bill for service members entering the service after June 30, 1985. The non-contributory GI Bill ended on Dec. 31, 1989.

VA provides vocational or educational counseling to persons entitled to VEAP educational benefits or the Montgomery GI Bill. Such professional counseling can be helpful in deciding on your educational or employment objectives. It can help identify vocational interests and abilities, potential employment opportunities and available training programs. This counseling may be useful also to the veteran who is experiencing problems or personal difficulties in achieving after-service goals.

Counseling may also be available through your service.

Veterans Educational Assistance Program

Veterans who entered on active duty between Jan. 1, 1977, and June 30, 1985, and who allowed their service to withhold part of their basic pay or made a lump-sum contribution so that they could get VA educational assistance after service should now be able to cash in on that assistance through the Veterans Educational Assistance Program. This assumes at least 181 continuous days of active duty and release from active service under conditions other than dishonorable. (If you are being released because of a service-connected disability, the full 181 days of service is not required.)

While participating in VEAP during service, you agreed to contribute a certain sum each month to an education account VA set up in your name. The government matched your contributions on the basis of $2 for each $1 you contributed. The government may also have contributed an additional amount to your account if you made contributions to VEAP prior to April 1, 1987.

Monthly benefits can be paid from this account while you attend any approved program. This includes high school, vocational or technical school, on-the-job training and apprenticeship, business or academic college, or university. It even includes elementary or junior high schools when appropriate. You may also be paid benefits for approved correspondence courses. You may study or train full time or less than full time. Less-than-full-time attendance extends the number of months you can get VA payments, but payments are lower. In addition, flight training is available through Sept. 30, 1994.

You get the same number of monthly payments for full-time training as the number of months you contributed to VEAP, up to a maximum of 36 months. Your total dollar entitlement in the form of monthly benefits equals your total contribution added to government matching funds, plus any additional contributions. This sum is then divided by the number of months you contributed to the program to determine the amount of your monthly educational assistance benefit. As an example of how this works, let's say that you contributed $75 a month for 36 months. The computation would be:

$2,700 - your contribution

$5,400 - government matching funds ($2 for each $1 you contributed)

0 - additional service contribution

$8,100 - your total entitlement

$8,100 divided by 36 months equals $225 - your full-time monthly rate.

In this example, you would be able to get $225 per month for 36 months of full-time schooling. For less-than-full-time training, the total entitlement would be paid in smaller amounts over a longer period of time. VEAP contributions can be as small as $25 or as large as $100 per month, and lump-sum payments can be made instead of monthly contributions. You have up to 10 years from the date of your last release from active duty to take advantage of your VEAP entitlement.

Active duty personnel can get VEAP benefits upon completion of their first obligated period of service or six years, whichever is less.

The Montgomery GI Bill

This law establishes a program of educational benefits for individuals entering military service after June 30, 1985. Service members entering the service after that date have their basic pay reduced $100 a month for the first 12 months of their service, unless they specifically elect not to participate. The reduction is non-refundable.

Active duty of three years or two years active duty plus four years in the Selected Reserve or National Guard will entitle an eligible individual to $350 per month basic benefits for 36 months. Eligible individuals who serve at least two years of continuous active duty, if the initial period of service is less than three years, will be entitled to $275 a month for full-time training. There is also a discretionary kicker of up to an additional $700 available. Service members who serve an additional five years active duty or two years active duty and four years in the Selected Reserve may receive a supplemental monthly benefit of up to $300 with a discretionary kicker of up to $300 more for 36 months. Also eligible are certain individuals involuntarily separated from active duty; they must have been on active duty on Sept. 30, 1990, and discharged after Feb. 3, 1991.

Service members eligible for post-Korean Conflict GI Bill benefits as of Dec. 31, 1989, who served either three years of continuous active duty after June 30, 1985, or two years of active duty followed by four years satisfactory participation in the Selected Reserve after June 30, 1985, may also be eligible, but will not have their basic pay reduced. These persons must have been on active duty on Oct. 19, 1984, and continued without a break in service through their qualifying period.

An educational entitlement program, referred to as the Montgomery GI Bill Selected Reserve, is available for members of the Selected Reserve, including the National Guard, who qualify. The reserve member must continue to satisfactorily participate in the Selected Reserve to receive benefits.

The following individuals may be eligible:

▢ Those who enlist, re-enlist or extend an enlistment in the Selected Reserve for six years or more after June 30, 1985;

▢ Those who are appointed or are serving as Reserve officers for not less than six years in addition to any other preobligated Selected Reserve service after June 30, 1985.

An eligible reservist may receive $170 per month for 36 months while pursuing full-time training. Eligibility ends 10 years after it begins or upon separation from the Selected Reserve, whichever is earlier.

Back to Work

Your military service gives you some advantages in finding and landing the kind of job that suits you best.

You can get free professional advice on how to match your skills and training to available civilian jobs. In some cases, you are referred ahead of non-veterans with equal skills and experience.

Before looking for a job, it is a good idea to take stock of your skills, your experience and your academic background, including courses you took in the service. This can help you decide where to apply for a job.

The following paragraphs discuss employment and re-employment rights for veterans and where to go for help in locating a job.

Employment Assistance

Veterans receive priority in job-finding help under the free veterans employment program operated by each state employment service and administered by the U.S. Department of Labor. The information you give about yourself is passed to an employer in the area in which you want to work.

Local veterans employment representatives, Disabled Veterans Outreach Program specialists and other staff members of the state employment service provide this assistance. Apply at the state employment service local office nearest where you want to work. All qualified veterans are given priority in referral to jobs or job training, but disabled veterans get top priority. In addition, veterans receive job counseling and testing when needed.

Employment assistance of varying degrees is also available through your service.

Unemployment Compensation

If you cannot find a job or training opportunity right away, you may be entitled to unemployment compensation, a nationwide program that can provide a weekly benefit payment for a limited time when you are unemployed, able to work and available for work.

Service members leaving active duty generally qualify for unemployment compensation if they have completed at least one full term of active duty and are separated under honorable conditions. However, to determine eligibility, it is advisable to file a claim for unemployment benefits, since each case is judged on its own merits.

When you register with your local state employment service office for work, file your unemployment claim. If you are entitled to payments, that office will let you know. The amount and the length of time benefit payments can be made are set by laws of the state paying your claim. To file your claim, take along Copy No. 4 of your DD Form 214, your Social Security card and information about civilian jobs you had before entering the service.

Re-employment Rights

You may have a legal right to your former civilian job or to one like it. This right also includes any pay increases or promotions that would have resulted from seniority, the passage of time and your continued performance on the job. This is true whether you were inducted, volunteered or appointed into military service. Federal laws on re-employment rights of veterans apply to most non-temporary jobs in private industry, federal and state governments and their political subdivisions. National Guardsmen and reservists also have protection against discrimination in hiring and employment because of their National Guard or Reserve obligations.

Returning to your old job may be a good opportunity for immediate employment following military service. If you have re-employment rights, time spent in service must be counted toward your seniority, as is the accumulation of all such things as a better-paying job in a higher classification where promotion or progression is based on passage of time, cost-of-living increases and pension plan participation. Therefore, the job you have a right to as a returning veteran may be a better job than the job you left.

To have re-employment rights under federal law, you must have:

- ☐ Left an "other than temporary" position;
- ☐ Left to serve in the U.S. armed forces;
- ☐ Served satisfactorily in the armed forces;
- ☐ Served not longer than four years of active duty (five years in some circumstances); and
- ☐ Received a discharge or release from active duty under honorable conditions.

You must apply to your preservice employer within 90 days of separation from active duty (31 days if a reservist or National Guardsman returning from initial active duty for training). These times may be longer if a service-connected disability is involved.

If you need assistance in exercising your re-employment rights as a veteran, enlistee, rejectee, reservist or National Guard member, contact:

- ☐ The nearest office of the Veterans Employment and Training Service, U.S. Department of Labor. The national office,

Veterans Employment and Training Service
200 Constitution Ave.
Washington, DC 20210

can put you in touch with the nearest local office.

- ☐ The nearest office of your state's employment/job service

Federal Jobs

The government offers many job opportunities throughout the country and overseas. Almost all skills are used in these jobs. In addition, a variety of trainee programs provide opportunities for young men and women interested in federal government careers to upgrade their present skills and earning power. As a veteran, you have certain advantages — usually termed "veterans preference" — in seeking federal employment.

This benefit adds five points to passing scores earned by veterans on federal civil service examinations and an additional five points for disabled veterans.

A claim for veterans preference can be made by checking the appropriate box on the Standard Form 171, "Application for Federal Employment." Those applying for the 10-point category need to also complete Standard Form 15, "Application for 10-Points Veterans Preference."

You will find some federal jobs almost anywhere you decide to live. The military installation where you were assigned may offer civilian employment opportunities. Federal job information centers, located in metropolitan centers throughout the country, provide federal employment information. You can find the phone number for the nearest center in your phone book under "U.S. Government."

Former service members who are separated but not retired receive full credit for civil service tenure, job retention, retirement and annual leave accrual for all of their years in uniform if they pay a percentage of the basic pay they earned while in service (7 percent for those under the Civil Service Retirement System; 3 percent for those under the Federal Employees Retirement System). In some cases, interest payments will have to be made. For further information, contact your personnel office.

Retired service members entering federal employment (except those retired for combat disabilities, who also receive full credit for years in uniform) receive civil service credit for only that part of their military service during a war or campaign or expedition for which a campaign medal was awarded.

A copy of your DD Form 214 will establish the period of your active military service and should list all awards, medals and campaign ribbons earned.

Insurance

Veterans Group Life Insurance

When you leave active service, assure that your Servicemen's Group Life Insurance is converted to Veterans Group Life Insurance. Unless you chose a lower amount or withdrew from the program in writing, you have $100,000 of protection under SGLI. You have 120 days' free coverage after separation or up to one year if totally disabled when separated (or until no longer totally disabled, whichever is earlier). The full amount of your SGLI coverage can, upon payment of a monthly premium, be converted to VGLI, a five-year, non-renewable term policy that provides very reasonable insurance protection during the years of transition into civilian life.

Applying. Shortly after your separation, the Office of Servicemen's Group Life Insurance will send you an application form to use in applying to convert SGLI to VGLI. The form will be partially completed by OSGLI. If you do not receive the form within a month after separation, request it from a VA office or from OSGLI. When the form arrives by this route, it will not contain the information otherwise provided by OSGLI. Therefore, when you return it to OSGLI, you must also send a copy of your DD Form 214.

The application and your first premium must be forwarded within 120 days of separation unless being separated for total disability (see below) to:

OSGLI
213 Washington Street
Newark, NJ 07102-2992

Premiums must be forwarded to OSGLI monthly to keep VGLI in effect.

Coverage becomes effective on the 121st day after separation. If you fail to apply within the 120-day period, you may still be granted the insurance, provided application on VA Form SGLV-8714 is made within one year of the 120-day period and you provide evidence of good health.

A member totally disabled for insurance purposes at separation may apply for VGLI at any time while total disability continues, up to one year after separation. A medical examination and evidence of continuing total disability may be required. In many cases, it will be advisable for the veteran to exercise the conversion privilege during the 120-day period rather than risk losing it at a later date.

Any reservist — a member of the Ready Reserves or other reservist — who suffers a disabling injury while performing active duty for training has the statutory right to participate in VGLI if application for this protection is made within 120 days after the termination of orders assigning that person to perform the period of active duty for training.

Beneficiaries. You have a free, unlimited choice of VGLI beneficiaries, just as you have under SGLI protection. You may designate as principal or contingent beneficiary any person, firm, corporation or legal entity (including your estate), individually or as a trustee.

If a person does not designate otherwise, VGLI proceeds are paid in accordance with governing law.

Converting to Individual Policy. Prior to expiration of VGLI, this protection can be converted to an individual commercial policy without physical examination or proof of good health. This is particularly advantageous to a person who has retired or separated from active service with physical disability or who may have developed health problems during the five years following separation or retirement. The commercial policy need not be offered at a lower rate than would be available to a person who does not have VGLI coverage. But it must be offered at no higher cost than the standard rate for that coverage and regardless of the VGLI insuree's physical condition.

VGLI must be converted prior to its expiration date, usually the fifth anniversary of the insuree's separation date. About 180 days prior to an expiration date, OSGLI sends to the insuree a list of insurance companies participating in the conversion program. The insuree can then seek out a local agent with whom to work out the individual permanent policy. If this list is not received, a letter to OSGLI should correct the oversight.

More Information. If you need additional information about your VGLI coverage and its eventual conversion to a permanent-plan commercial policy, contact OSGLI at its Newark address. You can also get assistance at any VA location.

90-Day Health Insurance

During separation processing, decide whether you will buy the U.S. VIP health insurance to help pay medical bills for you and your dependents during transition to civilian life. While this protection can come in very handy for illness or operations, be aware that maternity benefits are specifically excluded from benefits that can be paid. This exclusion applies to pregnancy, childbirth and complications resulting from either.

Persons retiring from active service don't need this health insurance. Their health care is provided through service hospitals and the Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services.

Disabled Veterans Insurance

To protect disabled veterans, particularly if they have canceled life insurance to which they were entitled during service, VA provides a National Service Life Insurance program.

This insurance is available at regular premium rates to any veteran who was released or retired from active duty after April 25, 1951, and who is in good health except for the service-connected disability. Application for coverage must be made within two years from the date VA provided notice of a service-connected disability. Policies issued under this program may be either term or permanent plans of insurance. All policies contain a provision for waiver of premiums during certain total disabilities.

For further information, call the Department of Veterans Affairs toll-free number for insurance, 1-800-669-8477, or contact any Department of Veterans Affairs office.

Social Security Benefits

Since Jan. 1, 1957, members of the armed forces have been covered by Social Security on a contributory basis. This means that you and the government, as your employer, have paid money into this program during your military service, including active duty for training.

Social Security provides four different kinds of protection: Retirement, survivors and disability insurance provide monthly cash benefits; and Medicare insurance provides hospital insurance and voluntary medical insurance. Retirement benefits are paid at age 62 or later; Medicare is available at 65 or later and to certain disabled persons younger than 65; and survivor and disability benefits can be paid at any age to those who qualify under the law.

Members of the uniformed services receive non-contributory wage credits of up to $1,200 a year for periods of active military service. This wage credit is in addition to credit for basic pay and is given in consideration of allowances received, such as rations and quarters. These extra credits increase the average earnings on which benefits are figured.

For answers to questions about Social Security, check with one of the more than 1,300 offices or call 1-800-234-5772.

Only One Number. Remember: For your entire life you need only one Social Security number, regardless of how many civilian employers you may have had in addition to military service. When you return to civilian life, you will give your civilian employer the same Social Security number you have now. A person who changes his or her name by marriage should notify the Social Security office of that change.

Disability Benefits

Details about assistance for service members facing disability retirement or discharge are contained in the pamphlet Disability Separation (DoD PA-1F/DA Pam 360-506/AFP 211-34/NAVMC 2675/COMDTPUB P1850.3/NAVEDTRA 46601-F), which is available through your service and from specialists who will counsel you.

VA Disability Compensation

It is to your advantage to file a claim for disability compensation with VA if you believe you have a disability, even though your service may not be separating or retiring you for disability. If both VA and your service grant disability ratings, you cannot receive full disability retired pay and full VA compensation at the same time. However, you can elect to receive whichever is more beneficial to you. You may even get a combination of both.

VA makes disability compensation payments for injuries and diseases related to military service. The amount depends on the degree of disability. Current benefits amounts are available from any VA office. If your disability is rated high enough, you may qualify for additional amounts for your dependents.

Early filing of a VA claim (even though you elect not to accept disability compensation as soon as it is payable) can be useful when you later apply for admission to a VA hospital or for vocational rehabilitation training, or if you later decide to take VA disability compensation rather than military disability retired pay.

If you feel you may qualify for VA disability compensation and have not yet applied for it, apply during separation processing by completing VA Form 21-526, "Veteran's Application for Compensation or Pension." Or you may apply any time after separation at any VA location.

There is no deadline for filing a service-connected disability claim with VA, but to be entitled to benefits from the date of separation, you must file a claim within one year of separation.

Vocational Rehabilitation

If you are entitled to VA disability compensation described above or would be entitled if you were not receiving retirement pay, you may apply for VA's vocational rehabilitation program. This program provides all services and assistance necessary to enable eligible service-disabled veterans to achieve maximum independence in daily living and, to the maximum extent possible, enable these veterans to become employable, obtain suitable employment and retain such employment.

Through individual counseling, each veteran is aided in selecting suitable objectives and in planning a rehabilitation program. Up to 48 months or more of benefits may be authorized for college and university, vocational school, apprentice and on-the-job training, as well as for special rehabilitation independent living training. VA pays the cost of tuition, books, supplies and equipment needed for training.

When a vocational goal is not feasible for the veteran, services needed to improve the veteran's capacity for independent living in the community will be furnished.

Throughout training, the veteran receives a subsistence allowance in addition to disability compensation.

Some veterans under the vocational rehabilitation program may elect to receive the Montgomery GI Bill educational assistance rates for college and other types of training and still receive some of the services provided under the vocational rehabilitation program.

In general, the period of eligibility is 12 years from the date of the first VA notification of entitlement to disability compensation. Under certain conditions, services may be provided beyond this period.

If you feel you have a qualifying disability, complete VA Form 28-1900, "Disabled Veterans Application for Vocational Rehabilitation," and submit it to any VA location.

You must file for this benefit within your period of eligibility. To gain the most out of rehabilitation services, you should file an application with VA as early as possible following discharge.

VA Pension

This program furnishes support for veterans with limited income who had 90 days or more active duty at least one of which was during a period of war. Their discharge from active duty must have been under conditions other than dishonorable. They must be totally and permanently disabled for reasons traceable to neither military service nor willful misconduct.

Payments are made to bring total income — including other retirement and Social Security income — to an established support level. The pension is not payable to those who have assets that can be used to provide adequate maintenance.

For additional information including current rates, contact a VA regional office.

Loans

Several government agencies help veterans and active duty members get loans for homes, farms and, in some cases, businesses. Although the loans are generally made by commercial lenders (there are some made directly by federal agencies), government programs make it easier for veterans and service members to borrow money.

VA Home Loans

VA loans help veterans buy homes with little or no down payment and long-term repayment plans. Veterans must be able to meet credit and income standards established by VA to qualify for the loan. Maximum interest rates are set by VA and are generally comparable to rates available for regular Federal Housing Administration loans. Veterans may have to pay costs involved in obtaining a VA loan that are customary in most real estate transactions, such as fees for a credit report, appraisal, recordation, survey and origination. A veteran with active duty service since Sept. 16, 1940, is eligible if discharged under other than dishonorable conditions.

□ A veteran with 90 days or more service, at least one of which was during the following periods: Sept. 16, 1940, to July 25, 1947; June 27, 1950, to Jan. 31, 1955; Aug. 5, 1964, to May 7, 1975.

□ A veteran whose only service occurred during the following periods must have completed 181 days of continuous active duty service: July 26, 1947, to June 26, 1950; Feb. 1, 1955, to Aug. 4, 1964; May 8, 1975, to Sept. 7, 1980 (enlisted); or May 8, 1975, to Oct. 16, 1981 (officer).

□ A veteran whose service began after Sept. 7, 1980, (enlisted) or Oct. 16, 1981, (officer) must have completed at least 24 months of continuous active duty or the full period to which the veteran was ordered to active duty (at least 181 days — 90 days for those who served during the Persian Gulf era, Aug. 2, 1990, to a date that had not been determined when this pamphlet was published).

If separation or discharge is for service-connected disability, any amount of service establishes eligibility for the veteran. VA home loan entitlement can be used while still on active duty or after separation.

VA guarantees loans made by a private lender to an eligible veteran for buying, building or improving conventionally constructed homes or farm dwellings. A VA loan may also be obtained to purchase a one-family unit in a condominium that has been approved for VA financing. GI loan entitlement may be used to obtain a refinancing loan as well as an initial-purchase loan. VA guarantees loans for the purchase of a manufactured home and/or lot.

Virtually any eligible veteran who has not purchased a home through GI loan entitlement can still do so. There is no time limit if entitlement has not been used. Even if a veteran has used loan entitlement, it may be restored if the prior VA loan has been paid in full and the property secured by the VA loan has been sold. Entitlement may also be restored when another eligible veteran assumes the loan and substitutes his or her VA entitlement for that of the original veteran.

Veterans who purchase houses during high interest rate periods may refinance their existing VA loans when interest rates are lower with little or no out-of-pocket costs. For more information about this type of refinancing loan, contact the nearest VA regional office.

An active duty service member with 181 days active duty (90 days if service is during the Persian Gulf era) can apply for a VA-guaranteed home loan while still in uniform. Buying a home with a VA loan while in service does not mean that you cannot purchase another home using a VA loan after you complete your service as long as the requirements for restoration of entitlement have been met.

To begin the VA home loan process, you must obtain a certificate of eligibility, which establishes that you completed the required military service and that you were discharged honorably. To apply, take Copy No. 4 of your separation document (DD Form 214) to your nearest VA office. If you are still in uniform, take proof of current service (Statement of Service) and any prior separations.

FHA Mortgage Insurance

The Federal Housing Administration of the Department of Housing and Urban Development insures mortgage loans for construction, purchase or improvement of homes. Veterans get special mortgage terms in some instances.

FHA-insured mortgages give veterans a chance to borrow with minimum down payments and over long periods of time. The loans are made by approved lenders, such as banks, savings and loan associations and mortgage companies. The FHA's role is to insure the loan, thus encouraging the lender to offer more liberal terms than the buyer might otherwise be able to obtain.

Veterans whose initial service started before Sept. 8, 1980, and who served 90 or more days on active duty are eligible for FHA loans and the special veterans benefits. There is no limit to the number of times a borrower can obtain FHA loans. (Veterans whose service started on or after Sept. 8, 1980, earn this entitlement upon completing 24 months of their original enlistment, unless separation from active service is because of service-connected disability. Veterans whose only service was in a reserve component will continue to be eligible for a Certificate of Veteran Status based on a DD Form 214 showing at least 90 days of active duty for training purposes.)

An FHA borrower must have a good credit record and must have at closing the cash needed for the down payment, incidental loan costs and required prepayments. A veteran's income must be sufficiently steady to meet monthly mortgage payments and other recurring obligations.

Veterans seeking the special FHA mortgage terms must obtain VA Form 26-8261, "Certificate of Veteran Status," before applying for an FHA loan. Application is made directly to any lender approved by FHA to make insured mortgage loans, and the lender usually serves as the home buyer's contact with FHA through loan approval. Any local field office of the Department of Housing and Urban Development can provide additional information, including a list of approved lenders in the area. There is no deadline.

Rural Loans

The Farmers Home Administration, the rural credit agency of the Department of Agriculture, has both direct and guaranteed loan programs. No special provisions apply to veterans, except that a veteran's loan application is given some preference in processing. Surviving spouses and children of veterans who die in service also have this advantage when applying for Farmers Home Administration loans.

The Farmers Home Administration has more than 2,000 county, district and state offices, many located in county seats. The nearest offices can provide full information and application forms. There is no time limit.

Business Loans

Business loans are available to veterans through the programs of the Small Business Administration. In addition, a 1983 law allows the Small Business Administration to aim loans specifically at Vietnam-era and disabled veterans. Interested veterans who were in service during the Vietnam era or have disabilities rated by VA at 30 percent or more can get details at any VA office.

Health Care

Hospitalization

Veterans can receive care in VA hospitals and other federal hospitals. All medical services will be covered during the course of hospitalization. Under certain conditions, transportation may also be furnished.

The following categories of veterans are eligible for VA inpatient hospital care:

- ☐ Those with service-connected disabilities;
- ☐ Former prisoners of war;
- ☐ Veterans exposed to herbicides while serving in Vietnam or to ionizing radiation during atmospheric testing and in the occupation of Hiroshima and Nagasaki who might need treatment for a condition that might be related to that exposure;
- ☐ VA pension recipients;
- ☐ Spanish-American War, Mexican border patrol and World War I veterans;
- ☐ Veterans eligible for Medicaid;
- ☐ Single veterans whose medical problems are not service-connected and whose annual income is $18,843 or less; and
- ☐ Married veterans or single veterans with one dependent whose medical problems are not service-connected and whose annual income is $22,612 or less (plus $1,258 for each dependent).

(Note: Income levels cited above are adjusted Jan. 1 of each year.)

Other categories of veterans may receive inpatient care on a space-available, resources-available basis. Priority and whether the patient must bear a portion of the cost are determined by income level.

If an emergency arises, the veteran's doctor can telephone the nearest VA hospital for approval of admission. If a doctor is not available, the veteran or the veteran's agent can make the call.

Although application at a VA hospital is preferable, you can apply at any VA location. There is no deadline for use of this benefit.

Any VA location can provide additional information on hospitalization for veterans.

Outpatient Medical Treatment

VA medical facilities provide outpatient medical care to veterans with service-connected disabilities and certain other veterans. Outpatient medical treatment may include medical examinations and related services such as drugs and medicines, rehabilitation, professional counseling and mental health services — this is only a partial list.

A veteran will receive outpatient medical services without limitation for a service-connected disability or any disability when the veteran has a combined service-connected disability rating of 50 percent or more.

Several other categories of veterans are eligible for outpatient medical services — some on a mandatory basis, others on a space-available basis. The latter includes ex-prisoners of war. Personnel at any VA medical facility can help determine your eligibility.

Outpatient Dental Care

VA outpatient dental care begins with an examination and may include the full spectrum of modern diagnostic, surgical, restorative and preventive techniques. Some treatment is comprehensive; other is limited — depending on eligibilities, service connection and/or relation to medical problems.

Care for the following is covered:

- ☐ Service-connected, compensable dental conditions or disabilities;
- ☐ Service-connected, non-compensable dental conditions or disabilities that existed upon discharge or release from at least 180 days of active duty — limited to one-time treatment (Note: Application must be made within 90 days following separation; not eligible if dental examination and treatment were completed by military dentists within 90 days of separation.);
- ☐ Service-connected, non-compensable condition resulting from combat wounds or service injuries and service-connected, non-compensable dental conditions of former prisoners of war;
- ☐ Non-service-connected conditions determined by VA to be associated with and aggravating a service-connected medical problem.

Complete dental care will be provided at VA facilities for veterans who were prisoners of war for more than 90 days and veterans receiving disability compensation at the 100 percent rate for service-connected conditions.

Disabled veterans participating in a rehabilitation program may apply for dental treatment.

Also eligible are veterans with non-service-connected dental conditions or disabilities for which treatment began when they were in VA medical facilities, provided it is professionally determined that the treatment should be continued on an outpatient basis.

Note: Veterans of the Persian Gulf war may receive one-time dental treatment if the dental condition can be shown to have existed at discharge or release from active duty service of at least 90 days.

Care in Military Facilities

All retired persons and their dependents and eligible survivors may continue to use military medical facilities on a space-available basis. The military services provide information about medical care for retirees and their families after the retiree leaves active duty.

In general, a person separated from the armed forces — as opposed to retired — can no longer be treated in a military hospital or dispensary. Exceptions apply to female members of the armed forces who are pregnant at separation and certain involuntarily separated members and their dependents. The nearest military medical facility can provide information and determine eligibility. Because military medical facilities may no longer be used by most veterans, it is wise to consider carefully, before separation, the short-term health insurance plan mentioned elsewhere in the booklet (see Page 9).

CHAMPUS

Retired service members, their dependents and eligible survivors can continue to use civilian health care facilities under the Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services — CHAMPUS. At age 65, however, CHAMPUS entitlement ends and Medicare takes over. A disabled retired person may become entitled to Medicare earlier than age 65.

Prosthetic Appliances

VA's Prosthetic and Sensory Aids Service Program provides medically prescribed prosthetic appliances (such as artificial limbs), sensory aids, rehabilitative and therapeutic devices, medical supplies and services to eligible veterans.

Furnished items and services include artificial limbs, braces, orthopedic shoes, wheelchairs, crutches, canes, artificial eyes, aids for the blind, hearing aids, therapeutic and rehabilitative devices, medical supplies and cosmetic restoration. Stump socks and hearing-aid batteries are furnished by mail order. Repairs to, and replacement of, appliances are furnished throughout the lifetime of those veterans meeting continuing eligibility requirements.

A veteran receiving outpatient treatment or hospital, domiciliary or nursing home care in a VA facility may be furnished the devices and supplies described above:

- ┐ For service-connected disabilities or related conditions;
- ┐ For disabilities associated with and aggravating the condition for which hospitalization was authorized;
- ┐ As part of domiciliary care when necessary;
- ┐ While receiving special monthly compensation or an increased pension based on the need for regular aid; or
- ┐ While receiving special monthly compensation or an increased pension by reason of being permanently house bound or 50 percent or more disabled from a service-connected disability.

Applications can be made at any VA facility. However, VA hospitals and outpatient clinics where prosthetic representatives are employed are generally best-equipped to provide complete prosthetics service.

Nursing Home Care

Eligibility for VA nursing home care units is essentially the same as for hospitalization, except that while hospital care for certain veterans is mandated by law, nursing home care is not.

Direct admission to private nursing homes at VA expense is limited to:

- ┐ Veterans who require nursing care for service-connected disabilities;
- ┐ Any person in an armed forces hospital who needs lengthy nursing care and who will become a veteran upon discharge from the armed forces;
- ┐ A veteran who had been discharged from a VA medical center and is receiving VA medical center-based home health services.

Normally, VA-authorized care in a private nursing home is limited to six months unless it involves a service-connected disability or a veteran who was hospitalized primarily for treatment of a service-connected disability.

Veterans who do not have service-connected disabilities may be eligible for care in a private nursing home, but may have to pay part of the cost for private nursing home care, depending upon their income.

VA Treatment for Alcohol or Drug Abuse

Eligible veterans requiring treatment for alcohol and/or drug abuse may be admitted to any VA hospital for inpatient care. They can also apply for treatment at specialized VA substance abuse treatment programs for inpatient or outpatient services.

VA provides a broad range of rehabilitative interventions. These include, but are not limited to, relapse-prevention training, vocational assistance, social skills training, family counseling, referral to self-help groups and coordination with other VA benefits programs.

Information about VA facilities that have specialized substance abuse programs and provide treatment for alcohol and/or drug abuse problem is available from VA health care facilities.

Domiciliary Care

Some VA facilities have domiciliary care units where care is designed to provide a "home" for veterans who have chronic conditions preventing their earning a living but not requiring unusual treatment.

A veteran discharged from the active military service for a disability incurred in line of duty or a veteran receiving VA disability compensation is entitled to such care when:

- ☐ Suffering from a permanent disability;
- ☐ Incapacitated from earning a living; and
- ☐ There is no adequate means of support.

Also, any veteran may be eligible for the care when medically needed if the veteran cannot pay for domiciliary care and meets certain other requirements for residence in a domiciliary care unit.

Agent Orange or Nuclear Radiation Exposure

VA may provide some care to veterans of Vietnam who may have been exposed to dioxin or to a toxic substance in a herbicide or defoliant used for military purposes.

VA has a program for examining veterans who are concerned about the possible health effects of Agent Orange exposure. Vietnam vets are encouraged to request an examination at their nearest VA health care facility. The veteran will receive a comprehensive physical examination and be asked to complete a questionnaire about service experience in Vietnam. The veteran is advised, through personal consultation, of the results of the examination. The exam determines the current health of the veteran and assists in detecting any illness or injury the veteran may have, regardless of origin, which may serve as a basis for follow-up.

The same process is open for any veteran who is found to have been exposed while serving on active duty to ionizing radiation from the detonation of a nuclear device in connection with participation in the test of a nuclear device or with the American occupation of Hiroshima and Nagasaki, Japan, between Sept. 11, 1945, and July 1, 1946.

Appointments can be arranged within two or three weeks.

CHAMPVA

The Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Veterans Administration — a medical benefits program — helps pay for medical services and supplies obtained through civilian sources by eligible dependents and survivors of certain veterans. The following persons are eligible provided they are not eligible for CHAMPUS (Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services) or Medicare:

☐ The spouse or child of a veteran who has a permanent, total, service-connected disability;

☐ The surviving spouse or child of a veteran who died as a result of a service-connected disability or who at the time of death had a permanent, total, service-connected disability;

☐ The surviving spouse or child of a person who dies in active military service in the line of duty and not due to the person's misconduct.

Vet Centers

Veterans who served on active duty during the Vietnam era or served in the war or conflict zones of Lebanon, Grenada, Panama or the Persian Gulf theaters during periods of hostilities or war can receive counseling through vet centers to assist them in readjusting to civilian life. Application can be made at any time.

Vet centers provide outreach and counseling for difficulties in readjustment following military service during the Vietnam era. The program includes psychological counseling (individual, group and family), employment and education counseling, marital and family counseling and a wide range of personal assistance including referral to other elements in the Department of Veterans Affairs and the veterans' community. Vocational counseling includes assessment for employment and assistance in job-finding. Psychological counseling includes help with post-traumatic stress disorder from combat experiences. Members of veterans' families may also be seen for counseling.

Post-traumatic stress disorder counseling includes help for anxiety, startle reactions, nightmares and other problems that can arise subsequent to wartime duty. The objective of readjustment counseling is to help veterans attain a well-adjusted work and family life.

A list of centers can be found on Pages 18-28.

Survivor Benefits

The federal government provides three main benefits for survivors of veterans and active duty members. These are Social Security survivor benefits; dependency and indemnity compensation, paid by VA monthly to survivors of those who die of service-connected diseases or injuries; and non-service-connected death pension, provided by VA for the survivors of wartime veterans who, following the veteran's death, have little or no income.

Social Security Survivor Benefits

Unlike the survivor benefits for which the families of service members or veterans alone are eligible, survivor benefits under Social Security are based on the fact that their military service is covered, along with the service of millions of civilian employees.

Neither wartime service nor the nature of the discharge is involved. A person who continues to work under Social Security after military service continues to build survivor protection for the family.

VA Dependency and Indemnity Compensation

In general, dependency and indemnity compensation is paid to survivors of service members or veterans who die as a result of service-connected illnesses or injuries. Travel to and from active or inactive training duty is also covered. Because of its application to training duty, this is a particularly good survivor benefit to remember if you are going to continue in a reserve component after active duty.

VA Death Pension

This benefit is designed for surviving spouses and children of wartime veterans, including Desert Storm, whose deaths are not service-connected but whose survivors have limited income. Certain income and estate limitations apply, and the date of a marriage to the veteran is also considered. A visit to a VA office will assist eligible survivors receive this pension. (Since wartime service is required, the survivors of veterans whose only service began on or after May 8, 1975, and was completed before Aug. 2, 1990, are not eligible for VA pension.)

VA Survivors' and Dependents' Educational Assistance

The basic monthly allowance paid to veterans going to school under the noncontributory GI Bill can be paid to surviving spouses of deceased veterans, spouses of living veterans and children of either (between 18 and 26 when entitlement starts) when the death or permanent and total disability was the result of service. Spouses and children of service members missing in action, held as prisoners of war or forcibly detained or interned in the line of duty by a foreign power for more than 90 days are also eligible. An eligible survivor (or dependent) can get education assistance payments for up to 45 months of schooling.

Claims

No benefit can start until a claim is filed. Your survivors have the responsibility to file the necessary claims. Therefore, it is most important that you stress to your family now the reasons for immediate visits to both a VA office and a Social Security office following your death. The death certificate and other papers — such as the marriage license, birth certificates for the children and proof of your military service — will be required.

Spouses have 10 years after entitlement begins to take advantage of these benefits. Children may get them until age 26, unless extended under certain conditions.

Montgomery GI Bill-Active Duty Death Benefit

A death benefit may be payable to a designated survivor of an active duty service member if the death is service-connected. The service member must have been eligible at the time of death or would have been eligible. VA will pay an amount equal to the participant's actual military pay reduction less any education benefits paid.

Other

Burial Rights

Some VA help with costs and arrangements for burial is available to survivors of a veteran at the time of death. In most cases, the funeral director or a local veterans group can serve as the contact with VA.

Assistance may include:

- ┐ Burial allowances and benefits;
- ┐ Burial flags;
- ┐ Burial in a national cemetery;
- ┐ Headstone or grave marker;
- ┐ Headstone or grave marker monetary allowance;
- ┐ Memorial markers and memorial plots; and
- ┐ Presidential memorial certificates.

Naturalization Preference

An alien who is serving or has served honorably in the United States armed forces does not automatically become a citizen of the United States by virtue of military service.

Although the service member or veteran must apply for naturalization and be admitted to U.S. citizenship by a court like any other alien, he or she would be exempt from certain requirements other aliens must meet.

Apply at the nearest office of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, Department of Justice, usually listed in the telephone directory.

Overseas

Certain VA educational benefits are available overseas to eligible veterans, their spouses and children. Details on these benefits should be obtained from VA when extended travel or residency overseas is planned.

VA will mail compensation, pension and education checks to most overseas locations, but VA-insured home loans are not available on overseas properties.

Veterans residing or traveling in foreign countries should contact the nearest American embassy or consulate for information and assistance.

Where To Go For Assistance

Department of Veterans Affairs

VA handles most government benefits and programs for former members of the armed forces. In addition, its veterans benefits counselors are well-informed about all other federal and state programs applying to veterans.

Soon after you leave active duty, VA will send you a letter applicable to your particular education situation and disability status to let you know of benefits available to you. Included with the letter will be a card on which you may request more information about any veterans benefit.

Representatives of the Office of Personnel Management and the Department of Labor are assigned to some VA centers to help provide additional job-finding assistance as well as information about on-the-job training and apprenticeship programs. In addition, community service specialists are available at many VA centers for counseling.

Soon after separation you may want to visit the VA office nearest the place where you plan to live. (Veterans residing in foreign countries, except the Republic of the Philippines, should contact the nearest U.S. embassy or consulate.) When you can't get to a VA office, VA encourages you to call rather than write. A phone call has the advantage of providing the information you need on the spot; by asking pertinent questions, counselors can assure that you get other needed information.

Information on VA benefits may be obtained from regional offices. Inquiries about and requests for service on VA-administered life insurance programs also may be obtained from the regional office and insurance centers in Philadelphia and St. Paul, Minn.

Special telephone services nationwide include:

Education Loan Telecommunication	1-800-326-8276

Many VA medical centers operate outpatient clinics in the centers or in other locations. Some clinics operate independently of medical centers. All clinics can make referrals for care in VA medical centers.

The following designations for medical centers indicate additional programs available:

- ◊ nursing-home care units
- ❖ domiciliaries

Some national cemeteries can bury only cremated remains or casketed remains of eligible family members of those already buried. Contact the cemetery director for information on the availability of space.

Non-Government Organizations

Various non-profit organizations, particularly those interested in veterans affairs, can also provide current information and help you with specific problems. Among them are the American Legion; Veterans of Foreign Wars; Disabled American Veterans; American Veterans of World War II, Korea and Vietnam (Amvets); the Military Order of Purple Heart Association; the Fleet Reserve Association; The Retired Officers Association; The Non-Commissioned Officers Association; National Military Family Association; and the American Red Cross. A good place to start if you need help is a local chapter, which can provide you with more information and the address of its national headquarters.

Leaving Service

Final Pay and Allowances

As you leave active service, you will receive all pay and allowances due. These include basic pay and special pay, incentive pay and allowances you may have earned through the day you are released from active duty. Exceptions will be made as a result of court-martial action directing forfeiture of pay and allowances and in cases of fraudulent enlistment or entry.

A service member discharged under honorable conditions may receive payment for up to 60 days of accrued leave. The amount due is paid in a lump sum at the time of separation. The one-time deduction for the U.S. VIP (see Page 9) will be made at this time if you wish to purchase it.

Persons who do not get paid for unused leave include those receiving discharge certificates under other than honorable conditions, or dishonorable or bad conduct discharges.

Transportation Home

When separated from active duty under honorable conditions, a service member is entitled to a travel and transportation allowance designed to cover the cost of transportation home and, in most cases, the cost of dependent travel and the movement of household goods there as well. An installation transportation office can provide complete information about this entitlement.

A word to the wise: The total amount of your pay and allowance at time of separation will probably be relatively large. You should arrange to carry only as much cash as you will need to get to your home area. Before leaving your duty station or the separation center, get checks or money orders with the bulk of the money. In this way, your cash will be safeguarded until you can get home.

Legal Assistance at Separation

At your place of separation, legal assistance officers are available to help you with civil legal problems. These officers can review and help you revise your will. They can also advise you about such things as revoking a power of attorney, filing delayed income tax returns and reviewing a property mortgage or a car purchase installment contract.

Estate Planning

It never hurts to start early in planning your estate even though you may think at the moment that you have little or no

"estate." You may not realize it, but your car, household goods, savings bonds and GI insurance all are part of your estate.

Getting out of service and re-establishing yourself in civilian life provides a good opportunity for you to give some serious thought to the overall security of your family. Review your will and similar documents. A talk with your personal affairs or legal assistance officer before you leave military service will not be time wasted. You will be assisted with many considerations that mean a better life.

Reserve Service Obligation

All persons now entering the armed forces incur a legal service obligation for eight years. This is true whether entry is through the active forces or reserve components. Generally, if you have not spent eight years on active duty, some of your eight year obligation will remain when you return to civilian life.

There are two general categories of reserve forces — Ready Reserve and Standby Reserve.

The Ready Reserve is composed of Selected Reserve units, individual mobilization augmentees and other members of the Individual Ready Reserve and Inactive National Guard. Ready reservists are subject to active duty in time of war or national emergency proclaimed by the president or declared by Congress or when otherwise authorized by law.

The Standby Reserve generally consists of members who have completed their statutory military obligations. Members do not generally participate in reserve training or readiness programs. They may be mobilized by authority of Congress.

Selected Reserve units consist of members of the National Guard and Reserve component who are organized into units and who have volunteered for such service. They are required to participate in periodic training drills (normally one weekend per month) and annual active duty for training for a two-week period.

Individual mobilization augmentees are reservists who are assigned to mobilization positions in active-force organizations. The amount of training each individual mobilization augmentee is required to accomplish in peacetime to ensure immediate and effective performance of duty upon mobilization is determined by the active organization to which he or she is assigned.

The Individual Ready Reserve consists of a pool of individual reservists not organized into units who are primarily prior-service members with two or more years of active duty.

Members of the Individual Ready Reserve may volunteer for active-duty-for-training attendance at service schools or correspondence courses.

Inactive National Guard personnel are trained ready reservists preassigned to Army National Guard units in peacetime to serve as fillers upon mobilization. Inactive National Guard members must attend a one-day annual muster but are not required to participate in the other training programs for their units. However, they may do so voluntarily.

After separation, your service will take the administrative action necessary to place you in the appropriate reserve assignment.

You may choose to join an organized unit or become an individual mobilization augmentee.

Why stay in the Ready Reserve, even after completing your statutory obligation?

National Guardsmen and reservists have played important roles in providing national security for the United States throughout its history. Today, they play even more vital roles in maintaining peace.

A strong National Guard and Reserve are required to provide the total military strength needed by the nation to meet its commitments and to protect its vital interests in the event of war or national emergency. Reserve forces are only as strong as the trained men and women who serve in them. Your country needs your experience in the Guard or Reserve.

As a member of the reserve:

- ┐ You can continue your military affiliation.
- ┐ You can earn extra pay in your spare time by utilizing military experience and skills you have now or can gain as the years pass.
- ┐ You can earn promotions — and more pay.
- ┐ You can receive cash re-enlistment bonuses as a member of either the Selected Reserve or the Individual Ready Reserve and an enlistment bonus for the Selected Reserve, or you may participate in an educational assistance program and a student loan repayment program.
- ┐ You can enjoy civilian life and at the same time develop close friendships with people who share your interests.
- ┐ You can take special pride in contributing to the welfare of your community and your country.
- ┐ After 20 years of satisfactory service in any combination of active duty and reserve time — the last eight must be in the component from which you will retire — you will be eligible for military retired pay beginning at age 60.

Every veteran should look into the benefits of belonging to a Ready Reserve unit. Contact a reserve career counselor before you are separated, or get in touch with your local recruiter as soon as you are situated in a civilian community.

Reservists are paid a full day's basic pay for each four-hour training assembly (inactive duty training). When on active duty for training, they receive the same pay and allowances as their counterparts on active duty. The financial advantages of Ready Reserve membership are obvious. As you advance in grade and pay levels, reserve service can be a source of substantial and dependable extra income.

Reserve units are organized the same as their active counterparts. Chances of promotion and acquiring new skills are readily available. As a reservist, you can also take advantage of a variety of courses — resident and non-resident — offered by the armed forces. Many of the courses are technical and will qualify you for better assignments in the Reserve. In many cases, this technical training can also help you get along better in your civilian job.

Upon release from active duty, each member of the armed forces is given a "retirement year end" upon which his or her year of reserve service is computed. To have a year of satisfactory federal service for retirement purposes, the reservist must earn 50 training points each year. To be eligible for retirement benefits, including pay, the reservist must have at least 20 years of satisfactory federal service. Then, benefits will start at age 60. Like reserve pay, they can prove to be a worthwhile extra measure of security for yourself and your family.

Selective Service

Young men must register under the Selective Service system within a period of 30 days before and 30 days after their 18th birthdays. If you were born in 1960 or later and did not register before entering active service, you are required to register after you leave service, even if you are in a reserve component. The necessary forms are available at your local post office.

A Citizen's Responsibility

As you leave service and locate permanently in a community, make finding out about voting requirements one of your first actions.

Vote in every election. This means those at the city, county, state and national levels.

Regular voting is a privilege and the responsibility of every U.S. citizen. Your vote — particularly if it is informed and sincere — does count.

After Service

Correction of Military Records

Each military department — Army, Navy (including Marine Corps), Air Force — and the Coast Guard has its own specific procedures for correcting military records of members and former members.

Acting through its Board for Correction of Military Records, the secretary of a military department has authority to correct an error or rectify an injustice in a military record.

Correction of a military record may result in eligibility for VA and other benefits, such as back pay and military retirement; the person (or survivors) could not otherwise get.

Any veteran (or service member) who believes there is an error or injustice in his or her record can apply. Make written application to the service concerned on Department of Defense DD Form 149, "Application for Correction of Military or Naval Record." This form may be obtained at any VA office and can be submitted by the individual, a survivor or a legal representative.

Generally, a request for correction must be filed within three years after discovery of the alleged error or injustice. In the interest of justice, however, a board may excuse a failure to file within this period.

Review of Discharge

The Departments of the Army, Navy (including Marine Corps) and Air Force, and, in peacetime, the Coast Guard handle reviews of discharges given former members.

Discharge review boards have authority to change, correct or modify any discharge or dismissal from the service that was not the result of a general court-martial and to direct issuance of a new discharge in accordance with the facts presented. A discharge review board has no authority to address medical discharges.

Any person who feels decisions concerning release from service were not entirely fair and objective or did not consider all facts in the case (unless discharged as a result of a general court-martial) may request discharge review. Application must be made within 15 years after discharge.

Discharge review boards conduct hearings by established boards in Washington, D.C. Also, based on demand, traveling review boards visit selected cities to hear cases.

Written application should be made by the former service member or, in the case of a deceased or incompetent person, by next of kin or a legal representative to the service concerned. Use DD Form 293, "Application for Review of Discharge or Separation from the Armed Forces of the United States." Persons seeking the assistance of a board for the correction of military records in lifting benefit bars brought about by Public Law 95-126 should use DD Form 149, "Application for Correction of Military or Naval Record." Either form can be obtained at a VA office.

Wearing the Uniform

It is proper to wear your uniform during reserve duty; and when you finish your reserve obligation, you may wear it as a civilian on certain occasions.

If you served honorably during wartime, whether the war was declared or not, and your last period of service ended under honorable conditions, you may wear your uniform:

☐ For military funerals, memorial services or inaugural ceremonies;

☐ For patriotic parades on national holidays or other military parades or ceremonies in which a United States active or Reserve unit is taking part.

Never wear the uniform under circumstances that would detract from its prestige or tend to discredit the armed forces.

For example, do not wear your uniform at a function of a totalitarian or subversive organization or while engaged in a business activity. It is against the law for unauthorized persons to wear the uniform of the armed forces.

Awards, Medals and Ribbons

Early in separation processing, look over your collection of military awards, medals, ribbons, badges and other distinguishing insignia. If some you have earned are missing, speak with your unit personnel officer about obtaining replacements. If you think you may be eligible for some you did not receive, mention this also. Your unit personnel officer will provide the service regulation outlining pertinent eligibility requirements. Or get the number of the service regulation and pursue it yourself. No one knows better than you when you were assigned and where, when you took special training or when you received special recognition.

Replacement medals and ribbons can be obtained from the address shown below at a small charge:

Miscellaneous

Federal Income Tax

The following information about federal income tax applies specifically to persons in active service or being separated from active service.

Extensions in Filing Returns. Any U.S. citizen who is not in the United States or Puerto Rico on April 15 (or the designated tax deadline) is allowed an automatic extension until June 15 for filing a federal income tax return for the preceding calendar year. This includes the filing of a joint return by a member and spouse. However, interest rates established for the Internal Revenue Service are charged on any amount due and unpaid on the April deadline.

ONCE A VETERAN

You can be assured of one fact: Your active military service helped your nation's defense posture. Through your broadened experiences while in uniform and because of the development and training you have undergone, you too have benefited from this service. You are now a trained and more valuable person to your nation; your status in your own community is high because of your honorable service to your country.

The various veterans benefits briefly outlined in this pamphlet are some of the ways in which your fellow citizens say "thanks."

Read carefully through the pamphlet at your leisure and retain it with other important military papers. It is a basic reference for you and members of your family now and in the future. Trained representatives at your nearest Department of Veterans Affairs office remain ready to continually update the information in this pamphlet as laws and procedures concerning veterans benefits are changed. VA Fact Sheet IS-1, Federal Benefits for Veterans and Dependents, should be available from your separation or retirement counselor as a reference. You can buy your own copy from Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, DC 20002.

Keep and Protect These Important Documents

For the rest of your life, you will be asked to produce records documenting your military service. These papers hold the key to benefits that you, your family or your survivors may claim many years after you leave active service. You, therefore, have an important responsibility to preserve these papers in an orderly fashion through the years.

If you have not already done so, start your personal record file. The large envelope (DD Form 473) your discharge papers probably were, or will be, in can be used for this purpose. Any file folder will also do the job. This personal file will save much searching as the years click away and will provide orderly safekeeping for your service-associated papers.

Use the file to keep available and in good condition the following papers:

- ☐ Your "shot record." You and your dependents not only should keep immunization records, but the immunizations themselves should be kept up to date. Continual immunity to typhoid, smallpox and tetanus is especially important.

- ☐ Your government insurance policies, together with payment records.

- ☐ Papers associated with your active duty, such as orders to, and releases from, active duty, pay vouchers, warrants, commission, diplomas and citations.

- ☐ All VA forms and correspondence, including certificates of eligibility for loans, VA File Number records and other papers related to administration of your rights as a veteran.

- ☐ DD Form 214, "Certificate of Release or Discharge from Active Duty." A most important document, you may want to register this record of service with your county recorder. Keep originals in a safe, fire-proof place. Photostat or certified copies in your personal file are valuable as ready references. The original copy of this document is automatically issued. Also, ask your separation officer to furnish you Copy No. 4 of this document for your records. You may need it immediately and perhaps many years in the future to establish your entitlement to VA and certain other federal and state benefits.

- ☐ Family records, such as marriage licenses, birth certificates, death certificates, divorce decrees, guardianship or custody evidence, and adoption papers are permanent records you are also obligated to care for properly and will probably need time and again.

Never give the original copy of a permanent personal or family record to another person, even for business purposes. Certified copies have the legal status of originals and ensure that when the original is needed again, it will be available.

Things to Remember

Veterans receiving compensation, pension or educational assistance: Keep your VA regional office up to date on:

- ☐ New addresses and ZIP codes;

- ☐ Changes in dependency;

- ☐ Changes in income, if you are receiving a VA pension.

Veterans who retained government life insurance: Keep your VA insurance office up to date on:

- ☐ New addresses and ZIP codes;

- ☐ Changes in beneficiary designations;

- ☐ Your desire to convert from term to permanent insurance. Remember, premiums on term insurance increase and the insurance must be renewed each five years. Remember, too, it's cheaper to pay premiums annually on all plans.

Veterans with VA-approved home loans:

- ☐ Protect your investment by keeping your property in good repair.

- ☐ Make your payment promptly—contact your lender for advice immediately if you become delinquent.

- ☐ You may prepay on your indebtedness at any time without penalty; minimum prepayment is $100 or the amount of one installment. (CAUTION: If you sell a home with the buyer assuming the loan, you are not automatically released from liability. Contact your lender and VA for details before selling.)

- ☐ Notify VA and lender of any change in address.
