SYNOPSIS:

Investigation has determined Aaron Swartz intruded into the MIT network without authorization by making entry into a locked closet containing networking components for MIT networks, connecting a computer to the MIT network, and downloading documents from JSTOR. Swartz was arrested by MIT Police and agents of the New England Electronic Crimes Task Force and charged with violation of Massachusetts General Law (MGL) for breaking and entering.

Agents and Detectives of the New England Electronic Task Force subsequently executed search warrants at Swartz's residence and office.

The San Francisco Field Office is requested to interview (b)(6),(b)(7)(C) and (b)(6),(b)(7)(C) two known associates of Swartz, to determine their knowledge of his activities.

Case continued in Boston.
