RE: LADISLAS FARAGO

George Sokolsky advised me that Ladislas Farago had written a book which he had sold to Funk and Wagnall having to do with an over-all study of espionage. For some unknown reason CIA sent a representative to New York with a view of blocking the publication of this book on the basis that it would serve no useful purpose. George did not know whether this was meeting much resistance with the publishers, but stated that it had become the subject of considerable comment.

A Remarkable Coincidence In the Cold War

By JAMES RESTON

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14 The capital saw something new this week the "surfacing" of a genuine straight. up and down Soviet spy, Yuri Alexandrovich Rastvorov of Dmitrovski

If you've never been to a surfacing, lit's a little like a launching. only without the champagne. Also it's more mysterious. Invitations were issued suddenly over the telephone about 4 o clock Friday afternoon.

There would be a "briefing," the man said, at 6:15 at the State Department. Very important: Internationally significant. Couldn't say more. Then he hung up.

Later an Assistant Secretary of State himself called. Don't miss this one, he warned Big show. At 6 o'clock there were about 200 reporters in the State Instrument's blue auditorium.

He didn't know, Tokyo was a long way from the United States.

Improvement Needed

Mr. Rastvorov isn't the first defector; from the Soviet spy system. and he won't be the last, but if Washington and Moscow are to go on throwing defectors at each other, the art of "surfacing" in Washington has clearly got to be improved.

What has happened here in the last couple, of weeks is that the intelligence agency of the Government! (the C. I A.) has moved out of the realm of secret service work and into the realm of public propaganda

PCENTRAL INTELLIGENCE AGENCY

The Doolittle Committee's examination of CIA is one of a number of attempts to improve CIA. Previous attempts have only resulted in patch work; piecemeal recommendations for improvement without touching on fundamentals. In other words - salves and pills have been used instead of radical surgery.

Fundamentally, the other functions of CIA have overshadowed, slanted, confused, and hindered the work of information gathering.

Psychological warfare, guerrilla activities, fomenting of revolutions—and so forth have engaged the full energies of the top officials. Ob—viously, information gathering must be the prelude to all other action and therefore is the most important function. It is hard to see how

CIA can effectively and efficiently function in collecting information with its present organization even though it might be possible to vast—

What is needed is a small, compact, well-trained, tightly disciplined, information-gathering agency entirely separate, apart and out of the control of CIA. Five hundred operatives could cover the world. Even with appropriate supervisory and clerical help, it would be a small budget organization. Its sole concern should be collection of information.

The present CIA should be confined to the specific duties given to it by Statute, that is, coordination, correlation and evaluation of intelligence received from other sources, and such other functions of "common concern" as the President desires to entrust to cIA now has the duty of collecting information abroad by virtue of Presidential Directive issued under the provisions of the Statute relating to assigning it functions of "common concern." This function could be taken away from it in the same way and entrusted to 339 an existing agency or a newly created apending to the same way and entrusted to 339 an existing agency or a newly created apending to the same way and entrusted to 339 an existing agency or a newly created apending to the same way and entrusted to 339 an existing agency or a newly created apending to the same way and entrusted to 339 an existing agency or a newly created apending to the same way and entrusted to 339 an existing agency or a newly created apending to the same way and entrusted to 339 an existing agency or a newly created apending to the same way and entrusted to 339 an existing agency or a newly created apending to the same way and entrusted to 339 an existing agency or a newly created apending to the same way and entrusted to 339 an existing agency or a newly created apending to the same way and entrusted to 339 an existing agency or a newly created apending to the same way and entrusted to 339 an existing agency or a newly created apending to the same way and entrusted to 339 and entrusted

It is suggested that in view of the urgency of this matter to the welfare of the United States, if the opportunity occurs during our dealings with the Doolittle Committee we diplomatically drop a suggestion along the above lines.

ADDENDUM - AHB:LL - August 18, 1954

This suggestion has considerable merit. However, a suggestion by us during the conference with General Doolittle could be written up as a recommendation from the Bureau that the structure of CIA be changed along these lines, which appears to be beyond the scope of the Doolittle interview. Therefore, I recommend we do not do it, although I will be glad to drop it into the conversation if desired.

RE: CIA TECHNICIANS

You will recall that the Central Intelligence Agency, with our permission, established a teletype machine in our Communications Section in order to establish direct communications between the FBI and CIA headquarters. The machine not only belongs to CIA but its maintenance and upkeep is handled by CIA technicians. In order for CIA men to work on this machine, it is necessary for them to go into our COde Room down on the fourth floor.

CIA technicians carry a card, with their picture stamped on the card, and a serial number beneath the picture. A second serial number is on the back of the card. There are no names of any individuals or organizations included on the card. This is supposed to identify the technician as a CIA representative. Prior to the CIA man coming to the FBI to work on the teletype machine, CIA calls over and indicates that one of their men will be over soon to work on the teletype machine. A name is given at that time.

When one of our people go over to CIA, our credentials are not respected. We are issued a special pass and we are then personally escorted to the section or office where our business demands our appearance. We later have to turn in this pass and are escorted out of the building. Aside from the fact that CIA fails to respect our credentials, it is felt we have no security at all under the procedure where CIA sends over their technicians to go into our code room and work on the CIA teletype machine.

On August 12, 1954, one of their men called over here from CIA and later came over to work on the teletype machine. He had with him at the time only the above-mentioned card. Mr. Wherry and I talked to this man and asked him to produce other proof of his identity which he did in the form of a driver's license and other identifying cards.

This matter has been discussed with the Bureau's liaison man to CIA, Mr. Papich. Papich has been instructed to advise CIA that some better system of identification must be worked out if their technicians expect to continue to gain admittance to our code room. He is currently working out plans with CIA where adequate credentials will be given to their men and a more secure program Ilpuo to Be Juo L will be effected. ( - 26-6) - 11 REGORDED - 56

SEP 10195 thought I would advise you of the above in the event CIA officials call the Bureau regarding this matter. An over-all memorandum will be submitted following completion of administrative matters(in CIA.

Reference is made to memorandum dated August 17, 1954, from Ur. DeLoach to Ur. Nichols wherein information was set forth concerning CIA technicians who periodically come to the Bureau for the purpose of inspecting a teletype machine which is used for communication between the Bureau and the CIA. As you know, the machine is CIA property and was installed by that agency. The machine is located in the Bureau's Code Room.

The Bureau has encountered a problem because the CIA technicians who come to the Bureau to inspect the machine have not adequately identified themselves. This is something the Bureau cannot condone, particularly since the *machine is located in a most sensitive area.

Liaison Agent Papich has discussed this matter with  was informed that the Bureau CIA. will not permit these technicians to enter the Bureau premises in the future unless adequate identifying datalis made available. stated that the Bureau certainly had obviously strong grounds for a protest and he would take corrective action. On August 24, 1954, ] advised Agent Papich that he would make available to the Bureau the names of individuals who might have occasion to inspect the teletype machine. Together with the names there will be submitted the numbersof the CIA passes carried by the employees. On the CIA pass is a photograph of the employee. It is believed that the foregoing should be satisfactory since the Communications Section can check the
