Report: Bizmen ply pols with donations

By MARCIA KRAMER

Daily News City Hall Bureau Chief

Mayor Koch, members of the Board of Estimate and the Democratic clubhouse organizations have raked in a whopping $30 million in campaign contributions in the last five years, mostly from fat-cat donors doing business with the city, according to a report released yesterday.

State Sen. Franz Leichter (D-Manhattan), in releasing his report on campaign contributions, said yesterday research had uncovered "an ugly picture of massive amounts of contributions to Board of Estimate members, and also to the county committees in an apparent effort to influence city actions."

"One can only conclude that money does govern decision-making in New York City," Leichter said.

Cozy relationship

Leichter's report comes at a time when prosecutors and other municipal critics have blamed some of the city's corruption scandal on the cozy relationship between those with money and those with political power.

Leichter's research director, Mike Weber, found that the 200 largest contributors gave a total of $10 million, and that 60% of them had business with the city. Of the top 50 big givers, 70% did business with the city.

The biggest donor was developer Donald Trump, who in the last five years has given more than $350,000 to Koch. Council President Andrew Stein, Controller Harrison Goldin, four of the five borough presidents and the Bronx and Brooklyn

Clubhouses

Joining Trump on the list of the "top five" donors were: developer Gerald Gutterman, who recently succeeded in having his Stanhope Hotel exempted from SRO hotel conversion restrictions, $349,000; Robert

Brennan, principal owner of First Jersey Securities, who wants to take over the city's Off-Track Betting Corp., $310,000; Seymour Cohn, owner of Sylvan Lawrence Co., the largest landlord of space rented by the city, $297,000, and Bear Stearns & Co., a company that has handled major portions of the city's bond underwriting, and Bear Stearns officers, $268,000.

The list of the top donors was peppered with major contractors, real estate developers and power brokers.

Included on the list were Nanco Contracting Corp., whose president, Carl (Andy) Capasso is under federal investigation for his business dealings with the city; Local 1814 of the International Longshoremen's Association, whose former president was reputed mob boss Anthony Scuto; convicted former Transportation Administrator Michael Lazar, and Wedtech, a Bronx firm that recently filed for bankruptcy amid allegations it improperly received defense contracts.

Need for limits

Leichter said his findings pointed up the need for the state to enact all-encompassing campaign contribution limits.

Responding to the report, Koch agreed campaign financing reform was needed but he lambasted Leichter, saying he should take his campaign to the steps of the statehouse in Albany, not City Hall.
