CIA HISTORICAL REVIEW PROGRAM

In his meeting with Castro on September 19, 1959, in New York, Mr. Faure, President of the General Assembly of the United Nations, told Mr. Khrushchev that he had met with Mr. Castro and that Mr. Castro was interested in improving relations between Cuba and the United Nations. Mr. Khrushchev was interested in this and expressed his willingness to work on this. Mr. Khrushchev suggested that Mr. Castro should meet with Mr. Faure, the President of the General Assembly, to discuss these matters.

Mr. Castro was very interested in this idea and agreed to meet with Mr. Faure soon. He also expressed his appreciation for Mr. Khrushchev's interest in improving relations between Cuba and the United Nations.

Mr. Khrushchev also discussed some of the problems facing Cuba and asked Mr. Castro for his views on these matters. Mr. Castro was very forthcoming and expressed his belief that Cuba needed to focus on economic development and social welfare, rather than on military expansion. He also expressed his concern about the growing influence of the United States in the Western Hemisphere and the need for Cuba to develop closer ties with other Latin American countries.

Mr. Khrushchev was impressed by Mr. Castro's views and expressed his willingness to work with Cuba on these issues. He also announced that he would be sending a delegation to Cuba to explore these possibilities further.

In his meeting with Mr. Castro, Mr. Khrushchev also discussed the situation in Africa and the need for the United Nations to take a more active role in helping to solve the problems facing African countries. Mr. Castro agreed with this and expressed his belief that the United Nations should be more proactive in helping to resolve these issues.

Mr. Khrushchev also discussed the situation in the Middle East and the need for the United Nations to take a more active role in helping to resolve the Israeli-Palestinian conflict. Mr. Castro agreed with this and expressed his belief that the United Nations should be more proactive in helping to resolve these issues.

In conclusion, Mr. Khrushchev was impressed by Mr. Castro's views and expressed his willingness to work with Cuba on these issues. He also announced that he would be sending a delegation to Cuba to explore these possibilities further.
(5) By no means any effort to oust Castro can only be successful in the support by the popular opinion within Cuba. Members of the FOC FIDOB do not have the support necessary in this regard. Unquestionably, the FIDOB members are fine people, but like Varona, Garces Arangue, and Cerviño, they are relatively old people. They are not the future of Cuba lies with the younger generation. Thus, one should look for people who are both young and either have or are able to inspire popular sentiment.

3. Speaking more specifically about resistance activities inside Cuba, Chibas talked about the activities of General Rey, whose representative in Cuba, Havana, is Manuel Rey, is currently engaged in reactivating the Resistance Civic and an organisation key based in the anti-Satanta.

He also tries to organize and bring into the Resistance Civic members and elements of the 25th July Movement and 26th July Rebel Army.

In this connection, Chibas mentioned his talks with Major Victor Paniagua, the Comandante Diego, who is a member of the Armed Forces.

4. Concerning activities outside Cuba, Chibas talked very generously about and recommended the greatest part the utilising of the Armed Forces, whose he seems to be in touch.

5. Chibas is also in touch with Ernesto and Nito Cardona, as well as Filippo Tarso.

6. Near London's foreign offices, Chibas said that he had talked to Carrillo and recebeu a cordially receptive; that he himself did not care whether or not he would use FOC, because no one label is as good as another one, but he was only interested in the thing by organised resistance based Cuban hands. He concluded that we in each organization needed outside help, and be further concluded that it would be a good idea to utilise one single label, such as FIDOB, for all anti-Castro activities, inside or outside the country. He stated that in himself is by parameter and implication reflected for public appearances, lobbying activities, and similar propaganda operations. His forces, he said, is in the clandestine organisation of a revolutionary activity.

7. Chibas notes that he is completely in the control of Marshal Rey and that if he is going to travel, it will do so in order to meet with the President.

8. Rather seriously, Chibas said about his own financial situation, 100,000 dollars credited and in this regard if it is needed.
9. It was agreed that Chibos would get in touch with Rupi to ascertain the current status of Rupi's internal organization and Rupi's desire regarding affiliation and/or integration with the FDL. Bender and Chibos would get together sometime during the week of 12 September to discuss actual cooperation further.
