SECRET
On November 26 and 28, 1962, a source furnished an account of a meeting that was held in New York City on November 26, 1962, between Professor Robert F. Kennedy and the following individuals: Robert N. Bayard, Robert L. Kahn, and John F. Kennedy. The source estimated that the meeting took place in New York City on the evening of November 26, 1962, before a group of about 50 people, including members of the Kennedy family. Prior to his trip to New York, the source had made arrangements for the meeting and informed the source that the meeting was held in the offices of the Kennedy family.

The source learned that shortly after noon on November 26, 1962, President Kennedy was at the International Center for the meeting and the discussion was opened with a question by the source on the reaction of University officials to the assassination of President Kennedy. The source has learned that President Kennedy advised the source that there was some shock and dismay within intellectuals circles concerning the episode.

Loyals and Kennedy staff, while convinced that the assassination was a disaster and as its result, the future was very uncertain, Kennedy assured the source that his first reaction to the assassination was the possibility of a military coup d'etat in the United States; however, Kennedy had convinced him that such a reaction was unfounded and based on a lack of knowledge of the American political system.
