VAREIA's plans were for a normal naval command and organization with command positions to be filled by capable and experienced graduate officers. The navy's military activities would consist of maritime actions by naval commandoes, infiltration of commandoes for sabotage activities, naval and aerial attacks on vital points in Cuba, and attacks on merchant vessels which continue to trade with Cuba.

with the United States Army, has been conferring with United States officials in Washington, D.C., concerning the future of the Brigade.

On January 13, 1964, [BERNARDO DE TORRES advised] he had just returned from New York City, where he had been visiting with [his six-year-old son since December 22, 1963].

[DE TORRES stated] the AVBC was continuing attempts to obtain bases of operation outside the United States. [He stated that when he and the AVBC President, JAIME VARELA CANOSA, returned from a Central American trip in September of 1963, they were] full of hopes and expectations. [They were particularly pleased with discussions with former Nicaraguan President LUIS SOMOZA; however, they have had no contact] with SOMOZA since the trip, and no action has materialized since those conferences in Nicaragua. [DE TORRES now feels] that SOMOZA made promises to him and other Cuban exile leaders which will never be fulfilled.
