Subject: Nigel Turner's Filmed Interviews

FYI.To: David Marwell/ARRBcc: Anne Buttimer/ARRB From: Douglas Horne/ARRB Date: 10/31/95 06:21:18
PMSubject: Nigel Turner's Filmed InterviewsNigel Turner, the British film producer who produced The Men Who Killed Kennedy, supposedly filmed over 300 interviews before assembling his five-part program.I recommended to Jeremy that we should try to get all of the raw footage, or at least the outtakes, donated to the JFK Collection as assassination records, and he told me he thought you were in agreement with that idea. Anyway, I think that would be worth a full-court press on our part.(By the way, a sixth episode will reportedly air this November, and it will supposedly be about the "Col. Dan Marvin/William Bruce Pitzer" allegations. The source for this rumor was Marvin's friend, who attended COPA and said that Nigel Turner had asked them not to make their presentation at COPA because it would have "scooped" his new November episode of T.M.W.K.K.)What do you think? Should our investigative staff approach Nigel Turner and ask for all of his interview footage from the mid-late 1980s? (His 5-part series first aired in England in 1988.)
