Subject:	Reply to Your Note
Body:	Paul, David Marwell got your internet e-mail, and I didn't...reason is, I am entered into the system as "Douglas Horne" vice "Doug Horne." David was alert enough to ask me if I received your message, and when I said "no", he forwarded it to me. (As always, the computer is exacting and unforgiving. It seems I am stuck with the more formal variant of my name, which was set up before my arrival. Since I've just had business cards printed that way, I'm not going to change it now...so from now on I'm "Douglas" vice "Doug".) Thanks for your kind reply and generous offer of assistance. You have already succeeded in a way, for your note has stimulated me to send you this, my VERY FIRST internet communication. Next time I have a question I won't hesitate to send a query your way via this circuit. Thanks again.
