Subject: Final Determination Disaster
While checking the Final Determination forms which I printed today for the reconsidered documents, I encountered a problem: document 104-10015-10223 is picking up information from both versions of the document (from both the 03/19/96 and the 01/31/96 meetings). Stated simply, there are too many postponements. In addition, the numbering is wrong. I have done only 10 of them. This is the only problem, so far, that I couldn't solve myself. In fact, only other glitch was the numbering on a couple of documents. However, the Final Determination Form is not a product which can be spot checked. Its accuracy is questionable to a degree where detailed checking of each form against the Determination Summary and against the document is required. Of course, this part of the process can not be totally automated, since the documents prepared by CIA must be checked at this point to confirm that they have been done according to the Board's determinations.
