Subject: national press club research, as we discussed
Please see the e-mail from Phil and see if you can pursue this matter with the National Press Club. We can talk about it on Tuesday. Thanks.

PMSubject: national press club research, as we discussed
According to a story in the New York Times, 12/91, Robert S. Strauss, then U.S. ambassador in Moscow, spoke to the National Press Club on December 13, 1991, and described how the head of the KGB "not only admitted that his agency had bugged the new American Embassy in Moscow but also turned over detailed plans that he said showed how it had been done." If the National Press Club keeps transcripts of remarks such as this, I would be very interested in getting a copy as soon as possible.Thanks.
