Subject: Update

Although I'll see you all on Monday, there is an important piece of news that I thought I would share with you today. The unofficial report is: The FBI has decided to drop its appeal on "half" of the records that were before the President. It is worth quoting Phil's note to the staff that announced the news: "This decision, if it holds, would represent significant progress in our efforts to get declassified and released information related to the assassination, the disclosure of which does not pose a current and genuine threat to national security. As members of the FBI team know, this dispute with the FBI has been brewing most of this year. Many staff members have provided important assistance at various stages. In addition to the members of the FBI team (Joan, Laura, and Kevin), I'd like to thank Eric, Dave, Jerrie, Cathy, and Eileen for their pitching in. "I'll fill you in on the background when I see you.
