1966 Inventory of JFK Autopsy Photos & X-Rays
Initial conversation w/ Patricia Eve Walkling re: 1966 inventory of JFK autopsy photos & x-rays
Description of the Call I located & spoke w/ Patricia Eve Walkling who now has the married name of Eve Carr (who prefers to be called "Eve") & lives w/in Great Falls, Virginia. Eve confirmed she once worked for Dr. Rhoads of NARA & that she was present during the inventory of JFK's autopsy photos & x-rays in 1966. After explaining the nature of the Review Board & our interest in speaking w/ her, Eve (who was very cordial) said she'd be happy to answer any questions asked of her & would be willing to either visit our offices or open her home to a visit by Review Board staff. She then said she is very puzzled at how she was found after all of these years, but figures that the government should be able to "track down" people w/ regard to such important issues. I asked Eve if she might recall any info re: the inventory or the assassination in general. She said she does seem to recall some names & will respond re: any names I mention. Immediately after this statement, she said "...What about Marion Johnson?...I'd like to know where he is these days...". I said I'd like to know the same thing & asked what she recalls about him. Eve recalls that Johnson was "...the person to talk to re: the WC..."; Eve told me she means that Johnson was the person at NARA w/ the most knowledge about WC records & is an important person to speak with. Eve said she doesn't recall Johnson being present during the inventory. I then asked about Frank Wozencraft & Eve was silent for a time, finally saying she doesn't recall a "Wozencraft" present either. My next question would have been to ask Eve to mention the names of people she recalls as being present during the inventory, but she began the following statement: -she wanted me to realize that she took her position as a participant in the inventory very seriously-she felt it was her duty to this country to be as professional about her work w/ it as possible-she didn't like the idea of having to handle the President's autopsy records, but told herself she needed to withdraw all of her emotions & focus on the task at hand-she "mechanically" went through the material, trying her best to not even examine the images w/in the photos-she merely catalogued the material & told herself she wanted to distance herself from the whole event so she could move on w/ her life-she recalls the inventory was conducted in room # 200-A, which was a small conference room at NARA during 1966
Eve then stopped her statement saying she'd be happy to talk more another time, but that she was home on sick leave & wanted to go back to bed. I apologized for keeping her on the phone so long, to which Eve said she realizes I didn't know she was not feeling well & she would have told me at the beginning of our conversation, but wanted to know more about my interest. Eve reiterated that
