At 2:30-3:00 P.M., the word was passed to "set the watch," which meant that all unessential personnel were told to go home, and all duty personnel were to commence standing their duty shifts. At about 5:00 P.M., he said he was with Dr. Boswell and they both heard on the radio that the President's body was being taken from Parkland Hospital in Texas to Bethesda NNMC for an autopsy. Realizing that all laboratory, morgue and x-ray facilities were part of the medical school where he was standing duty, he remembers saying to Dr. Boswell, "It's going to be one hell of a night." About 30 minutes later, at about 5:30 P.M., he said he was called to the office of the Chief of the Day for the National Naval Medical Center (NNMC--the entire Bethesda complex, including the medical school and the hospital), a Chief Ledbetter, who had 3 or 4 Secret Service agents in his office. The Secret Service agents told the Bethesda duty officers that the autopsy would be at NNMC Bethesda, and directed them to secure all entrances and exits to the Bethesda complex which would lead to the morgue and laboratory area. Mr. David rounded up Navy personnel from various barracks, and assigned them to security duties.Casket Entry Into Morgue At about 6:30 P.M., Mr. David said he
