NR_key_name: 20C8A9BEDFB455AA852564E90073BDEE SendTo: CN=David Marwell/O=ARRB @ ARRB

CopyTo:

DisplayBlindCopyTo:

BlindCopyTo: CN=R ecord/O=ARRB

From: CN=Dave Montague/O=ARRB

DisplayFromDomain:

DisplayDate:08/04/1997DisplayDate_Time:5:04:29 PMComposedDate:08/04/1997ComposedDate_Time:5:04:13 PM

Subject:

FYI...Attempt to verify Raymond Larocca as an attorney & possibly the same person

IVIISCELLANEGOS ACTIVITTISSUE # 7500cument s Author. Dave iviontague/Anno Date Createu.

-----(c) 1997 Washington Post. All rts. reserv.2163474

OBITUARIES - Raymond G. Rocca, CIA Official, Dies The Washington Post, November 13, 1993, FINAL Edition By: Richard Pearson, Washington Post Staff Writer Section: METRO, p. b05 Story Type: Obituary Line Count: 194 Word Count: 2138Raymond G. Rocca, 76, who retired in 1975 from the Central Intelligence Agency, where he had served as acting chief of counterintelligence, died Nov. 11 at Arlington Hospital after a stroke. He lived in Falls Church.Mr. Rocca began his intelligence career during World War II. It included service in Rome, where he went in 1944 with the Office of Strategic Services (OSS) and later with the Central Intelligence Group and then the newly established CIA. In 1953, he joined the CIA's counterintelligence staff in Washington. He rose to become head of the staff's research and analysis department and then in 1972 was named deputy chief of counterintelligence. He served briefly as the staff's acting director before retiring from the agency in 1975. During his years in Rome, and again in counterintelligence, he served as perhaps the closest aide of the legendary James Jesus Angleton. As head of counterintelligence, the mysterious, powerful and controversial Angleton was in charge of examining and preventing Soviet infiltration operations against the CIA and other government groups. British journalist Tom Mangold, in "Cold Warrior," his 1991 biography of Angleton, called Mr. Rocca "the man closest to him (Angleton) throughout his working life." In counterintelligence, Mr. Rocca became known for his voluminous record-keeping and as an authority on historic Soviet intelligence operations. He had lectured on such operations as "The Trust," a group set up by Soviet intelligence that was disguised as an anti-Soviet organization and thus trapped enemies of the Sovietintelligence operations. He had lectured on such operations as "The Trust," a group set up by Soviet intelligence that was disguised as an anti-Soviet organization and thus trapped enemies of the Soviet Union. He also was an authority on the "Rote Kapelle," or Red Orchestra, a group of agents that penetrated the upper reaches of Nazi Germany and was run by Soviet military intellgence. In addition to his counterintelligence work, he had served as liaison between the agency and the Warren Commission, which investigated the Kennedy assassination. He also had served on the editorial board of the agency's quarterly "Studies in

recstat: Record

DeliveryPriority: N DeliveryReport: B

ReturnReceipt: Categories:

Body: