Subject: the morning

As we expected, everything was a little behind schedule. Grace was awesome of course, and slept all the way through and into Dottie's apartment. She was still out when I left. I thought about driving either to a lot near Clarendon or to the lots at W. Falls Church, which is what out neighbor Bob does. I finally decided that I might still be able to make my back-up bus which is the 2C at 8:13. But I missed it. I waited from about 8:15 until 8:40 for the next bus which was running quite late. The most maddening part about it was that three "not in service" busses rolled by in the meantime, which means you get your hopes up and then they get deflated. I got hear at about 9:20. Again, Grace was awesome and I told Dottie about the sniffles. I wrote the check and put it in the front mesh pocket of the bag (where I always do), but I usually mention that to Dottie, and I didn't this morning. I'm sure she'll get it, but just make sure. I love you.p.s. I left my pager at home, so you'll have to call me directly if you want to get in touch. XOXOXOX
