Subject: My New Home Computer

Due to my purchase of a new home computer, I have some comments and questions.1. On my old computer, you installed a 28K modem, LOTUS Notes software to support the office databases, and office dial-in software. I am not now using this computer at home. I have given the computer to my daughter, who is not currently hooked to the INTERNET. She has no use for the modem, software, or databases. I will bring in the external part of the modem, but you would need to remove the port -- if it is even worth the trouble.2. How difficult would it be to re-install the Notes and Dial-in software on my new computer? Can I do it easily or would you need to come back to my house?3. What is the easiest way for me to download and upload on a regular basis data from the laptop into my home machine? Is there a way better than using floppies?
