Subject: Word Perfect Quirk

See if you've run into this before...On several machines throughout the office (both Win95 & 3.1) when you try to edit a long footnote (one that spans two pages) WordPerfect seizes up and you have to restart Windows before you can continue. This only happens when you try to edit the portion of the footnote that's on the second page. We've managed to get away with not fixing it so far, but with the final report coming up, I think we'll actually need to be editing these footnotes, so we should try to come up with something. See you tomorrow, as I recall...
