Subject: Re: Lexis/Nexis access
I think Jack's office would be a good idea, unless there's a password issue re having access to that computer. That way anyone can go in and use it as they have time and you don't have to hook up multiple individual machines with modems and load the software. Since we have generalized passwords now, we can set it up like my machine is so that the login password is entered automatically. Should we decide to get this permanently, we'll probably have to devise a different solution.
