Dear David,It seems as if we finally e-connected. I am the one who wrote "trying again." I don't understand why there was a problem. My machine automatically puts a space on either side of the @ sign -- again I don't know why.You should feel free to disseminate my description of the Humes and Boswell depositions. I very much appreciate your asking before sending it on to others.I was interested in your comments about videotaping the depositions. We gave that idea serious consideration, but decided not to do it for essentially two reasons. The first pertained to the possibility of inadvertently capturing any of the autopsy material on videotape. During the deposition, the doctors stood up, held up photos and x-rays, and walked back and forth between photos. This would have been a problem to videotape without capturing the images. The second issue pertains to the equivocal nature of attempting to capture a demeanor on videotape. Sometimes it works, sometimes it doesn't. As you know from the OJ trial, to which you refer, the medium indeed can become the message. We opted for the written and oral record. Who said anything about Dr. Finck? Do you know where he is?Best,Jeremy
