Subject: Re: Intern Project

Looks great.I would only add that the librarian is limited to what he/she can do. Sending us an actual copy of the paper is not probable; sending us a photocopy of the article would be a favor. It is the ideal place to start, however, because it's free.My guess is that, in most cases, the intern(s) will be directed to the 'back issues' department, which charges for copies of papers. It is important for the intern(s) to find out the price and required form of payment (usually check.)Thanks!

Your memo really covers things quite nicely.I would only add two things:If the newspaper is willing to fax us a copy, and that's the best we can do, the student should be ready to accept that.Also, you could have the student draft a letter to accompany any checks for any articles we decide to acquire.Eileen - Anything you can think of to add?
