Subject: Re: Fwd: book reviews

Thanks for the note. I have had a quick look at the Turner book and am anxious to get a chance to read it. We need to chat about whether it is appropriate for you to write a review (should we choose to review it). Michael mentioned that you had sent out some books for review. Please let me know the details. I'll speak to you soon.

Forwarded message: From: Pmiller@ushmm.org (Miller, Paul B.) To: Dmarwell@aol.com Date: 97-01-09 17:56:35 EST Dr. Marwell, I sent the below message to Richard Breitman today and he has deferred the response to you. I'm sticking a copy of Turner's book in the mail. If you decide that it would be a good one to review in the journal, please let me know if you think that the fact that I did a field (though not my dissertation) with him as a grad student precludes me from writing a review. (I've already read the book.)
Thanks, PM _____ Forward
Header _____ Subject: Author: Paul B. Miller at USHMM Date: 1/9/97 4:49 PM Hi, Richard. Speaking of Henry Turner's new book (by the way, we grad students called him HAT amongst ourselves), it just so happened to arrive in my mailbox this afternoon, courtesy of Addison Wesley. I don't know if you or Marwell would deem a book on Hitler's emergence as German chancellor related enough to Holocaust/genocide for a journal review, but HAT has staked out the claim that without Jan. 1933 and the bunglings of several key German leaders, what followed would have been vastly different and there certainly would have been no Holocaust. I'm sure he'll be criticized for all his "what if" speculations, but the point is: Should we review it in the journal? And secondly, can I? (that is, is this allowed?). I look forward to your response. PM
