If you've already received this, my apologies. My computer ordered me to shut down notes before I replicated, so I wasn't sure if this was sent the first time or not. Oh well!

Says who?? I guess I missed that interpretive regulation (although the scorn of my friends and colleagues is probably all the disincentive I would normally need to get me to toe the no-footnotes line)!! In my defense, Manuel's musing asked for verification/rebuttal of a specific charge and, since I knew I would not be perceived as unbiased on the issue, I thought it best to verify and validate my rebuttal! (Hope this gets me off the hook, and I promise to never, never do it again -- except maybe on another Irish-related issue...) And you were right the other day... it is nice to have my library right here beside my computer... Have a great weekend, I'm off for my run along the canal!

You can't put footnotes on a musing, can you? Didn't we issue some sort of interpretive regulation on that?
