Actually, Joe was hoping to get back a little earlier today so that he could see people before they left for the day. So, I think an early happy hour won't be a problem. He also has to get to Baltimore tonight before the trains stop running.

It seems to me that The Rock would be cool to check out. Also, I would suggest an relatively early start time. I have a selfish reason for this, as I have to be somewhere else later this afternoon (6:30/7:00) and would prefer to be able to spend as much time as possible with Mr. Freeman, et al. Joe and Brian are slated to get back from NARA around 4:45. Anybody have a problem with maybe going around 5:00?

Subject: This evening
There have been mumblings around the office about a happy hour tonight (Joe Freeman's last night in town!) I have suggested to a few people a place called The Rock. It is on 6th (I think) right by the new stadium. I've never been but it got a write-up in last week's City Paper. Just thought I'd toss this out. Any suggestions welcome. The start time of this gathering is up in the air -- it probably depends on everyone's schedule.
